Truman Signs GOP Inflation Curb Measure

Bill Will Tighten Installment Buying, Big Personal Loans

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP) — President Truman accused Congress today of knuckling down to special interests and choosing to "fight inflation by putting the average American family through the wringer."

That was his summation of the effect of the lawmakers' refusal to grant his request for price and rationing powers and other controls as a club to beat back to high prices. He made it in a statement as he signed the anti-inflation measure the Republican-dominated special session did give him — power to tighten up on consumer credit and bank lending.

The statement made official something that long had been taken for granted — that the text of the Democratic campaign will be the issue of high prices and that it will be pointed squarely at labor in particular and the little fellow in general.

The selection of the laboring man as the bearing point for the campaign had been underscored earlier in the day with official selection of a Detroit Labor Day speech for the President's takeoff in his personal drive for November votes.

Limits Buying Power

The over-all plan of the bill the President signed with harsh words today is to make it harder for people to buy expensive things or borrow money. The idea is to slow down buying on the theory that production will catch up and that will bring prices down.

A secondary idea is to hold back money that might otherwise be spent now, and ease a possible drop in business later.

There are two approaches in the bill:

1. Power to bring back the wartime controls on installment buying, requiring larger down payments and shortening the time for paying off balances.

2. Boosting the interest rate on loans, by raising bank reserve requirements so that lending institutions will have less money to put out.

Mr. Truman had asked for far more sweeping powers, including standby authority for price control and rationing.

Senator Wherry (R-Neb) called the Truman statement "sheer nonsense" and added:

"We know and the American people know OPA rules, regulations and directives will not work in peacetime because we live in a Republic."

GOP Answers Attack

"The Republican Congress struck at root causes of inflation: the President's spendthrift budget; his opposition to tax reduction when everybody knows taxes enters into the cost of everything we buy; his failure to use his powers to control exports from our short supply; his failure to use his monetary controls, and his opposition to sensible labor-management relations."

Federal Reserve Board officials will administer both the consumer and bank credit ends of the new law. They said consumer credit regulations will not be issued until later this week, perhaps Friday. It is up to the board to fix down payments and pay off times. During the war the rule on most wanted household items was one third down and 15 months.

Board officials said it was unlikely bank credit controls would be invoked immediately. They may come into force later in the year, depending on the trend of bank lending.

Berlin Newspaper Says Russ Fifth Column At Work

Declare Purge Planned If West Powers Leave

BERLIN, Aug. 16 (AP)—A Berlin liberal newspaper said today that a communist "fifth column" is at work in the Soviet-blockaded western sectors of the city—preparing for the day they hope the Western Powers will leave.

The liberal Democratic Newspaper Montags Echo said the Communists had prepared a purge list of "hundreds of thousands" of anti-Communists upon whom they will take revenge if the Western Allies quit Berlin.

Spy System Working

"The Communist spy system has worked its way into industrial workers' councils, into commerce, into postal and telegraph systems of Western Berlin, and there makes systematic preparation for 'X-day'—the day the Communists hope the Western Allies will leave Berlin," the newspaper said.

The newspaper appealed again to the Western Powers not to negotiate "a new Munich" in the Four-Power Moscow talks.

"Berlin today stands for Europe," it said. "Even the slightest concession here by the Western Powers would have repercussions throughout Europe—and beyond — which would weaken the stand against aggressive Communism."

The pro-Soviet German press at the same time declared the Moscow talks can be a success only on Soviet terms.

"The talks can be described as a success if the negotiators succeed in establishing a useful basis for a common German policy of the four powers," the Russian-licensed Nacht-Express said. "Taking into account all compromises, this must be in the direction of the decisions of the Warsaw conference of foreign ministers."

Conference Explained

The Warsaw conference of foreign ministers of Russia and her Eastern satellite countries last June denounced the West as "splitters of Germany" and called for a "provisional all-German government, withdrawal of occupation troops and an early peace treaty with Germany.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American Military Governor, said in Frankfurt he expects the Western Allies to stand firm on their present German policy in the Moscow discussions.

Russians Give Version Of Teacher's Window Leap

Consul General Says Mrs. Kosenkina Was "Mentally Deranged"

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. (INS)—Jacob Lomakin, Russian Consul General, charged tonight that Mrs. Oksana Kosenkina made her almost fatal leap from a third-floor window of the consulate last week while mentally deranged.

White guard "fiends," American officials, police and courts, and the United States Press and radio were officially lumped together by the consul as the forces which drove the little Russian teacher to jump while in unsound mental and physical condition.

Blames "Kidnaping"

The responsibility "for everything that has occurred," Lomakin concluded, "lies with those who organized the kidnaping and committed violence toward Mrs. Kosenkina, a Soviet citizen, as well as with those American officials who by their actions and statements have thus caused the nervous breakdown of Mrs. Kosenkina which has driven her in her despair to the attempt of suicide."

The statement was distributed by Lomakin shortly after 7 p. m. in the foyer of the impressive Soviet consulate just off Fifth Avenue in 61st Street.

Newsmen Summoned

Sixty newsmen and camera men, summoned for the conference, were waiting on the sidewalk when the heavy, wrought iron doors of the consulate were finally opened to them.

The youthful consul, smiling, assured and self confident, said to reporters crowded around him:

"Today, you have submitted to me many questions for answering. This is my answer."

With that, Lomakin held up a batch of two-page statements in English, while another member of the consulate distributed the same

Western Envoys Still Work For East-West Peace

Diplomats Silent As Meeting Ends

MOSCOW, Aug. 16 (AP)—Envoys of the United States, Britain and France met with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov again tonight in the current negotiations to settle East-West differences in Berlin and Germany.

The meeting in the walled Kremlin was the longest since the negotiations began July 31, lasting three hours and 40 minutes. None of the Western diplomats would comment as they left the Kremlin. They refused even to state whether they thought there would be another meeting.

Visit British Embassy

U. S. Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith and French Ambassador Yves Chataigneau went immediately to the British Embassy with Britain's Special Envoy, Frank Roberts, for a conference.

Smith seemed in good spirits as he sent his chauffeur to get something to eat. But the envoys themselves went right into the meeting without stopping for food.

(A responsible diplomatic informant in London said Molotov was to give Russia's reply to the Western proposals for a Berlin settlement at today's meeting. He said the Western proposals had been "rehashed but not modified" and added today's talk might be the climax of the 18-day East-West discussions.

(In Frankfurt, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor in Germany, said he expected the Western powers to remain firm on their plans for Germany in the Moscow talks.)

Makes Sixth Meeting

Tonight's conference was the sixth with Molotov. The Western envoys met with the Soviet Foreign Minister July 31. He was present also at the August 2 meeting with Prime Minister Stalin, which was followed by meetings with Molotov on August 6, August 9 and August 12.

The three Western diplomats met among themselves at the British Embassy before they left for the Kremlin at 5:45 p. m., Moscow time (9:45 a. m. EST.) They returned to the British Embassy at 9:43 p. m.

Grand Jury Seeks Legal Gambling

LA PLATA, Md., Aug. 16. (AP)—The grand jury today recommended legalized slot machines, bingo and raffles for Charles County.

Recalled at its own request for a special one-day investigation, the jury also reported it would seek state police aid "to clean up the gambling and liquor situation in this county."

"The state police should be asked to lend whatever assistance to the sheriff's office as is needed to clean up the gambling situation in Charles County, which most everyone seems to know is getting progressively worse but about which the grand jury has been able to secure no evidence or witnesses," said the report signed by Foreman Foster M. Reeder.

It said the grand jury "is writing" Col. Beverly Ober, State Police Superintendent, "asking that the support of his department be given the sheriff's office."

The report said Sheriff Elmer M. Quade and four deputies appeared before the jury at its seven-hour session and "some admitted that gambling is going on but presented no definite evidence and no names as all they knew was hearsay."

The May Term Grand Jury, in its report May 19, charged "flagrant and widespread disregard of gambling and liquor laws," and blamed the county's "duly elected enforcement officers."

'Tokyo Rose' To Face Treason Count In U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP)—The Justice Department today decided to go to bat with a treason prosecution in the so-called "Tokyo Rose" broadcasts of World War II.

Attorney General Tom Clark asked U. S. Army authorities in Tokyo to arrest 32-year-old Iva Toguri D'Aquino and send her to San Francisco to face a Federal Grand Jury there "at as early a date as possible."

The action climaxes more than three years of investigation. The inquiry, Clark said, indicated that Mrs. D'Aquino, born in Los Angeles July 4, 1916, was one of six English-speaking Japanese women who broadcast over radio Tokyo between 1943 and 1945.

The Attorney General said she was the only American-born woman in the group to which the American Armed Forces in the Far East applied the collective nickname "Tokyo Rose."

The feminine broadcasts over Tokyo's powerful radio station became a legend among U. S. fighting men in the desolate places of the Pacific, to which they were beamed.

The programs were elaborately planned. Soft-voiced and sexy in appeal, they were employed as nightly reminders to American combat men on lonely islands of what they were missing by not turning around and going back home.

Often, the broadcasts included imaginary descriptions of the scenes in famous American good-time centers, with heavy emphasis on how much fun stay-at-homes were having.

Throughout the war, the Japanese women broadcasters used the latest American dance recordings as a backdrop for their patter.

Just how radio Tokyo got this up-to-the-minute stuff has never been fully explained.

Truth Of Hiss Statement Is Still In Doubt

Spy Probers Set Aug. 25 Meeting To Get All Facts

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP)—The House Un-American Activities Committee investigating reports of Communist spies in the government quizzed Alger Hiss for three hours today and reported it still doesn't know whether he or his accuser is telling the truth.

Hiss, former State Department official, has been accused by Whittaker Chambers, an admitted-ex-Communist, of being a member of an "elite" Communist movement in Washington in the early 1930's. Hiss has denied it and testified that he never knew Chambers.

Hiss was questioned in private today.

The committee set August 25 for Hiss and Chambers to come face to face with their contrary stories. Whether this session will be open to the public has not been decided, Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R-NJ), told reporters.

To Resume Open Hearings

Meanwhile, the committee's spy investigation will continue through subcommittees, with public hearings to be resumed September 7.

Since the original Chambers accusation and the Hiss denial under oath in public hearing, the committee has questioned both men behind closed doors. After Hiss' turn today he declined to comment to reporters but Committee Chairman Thomas made this statement:

"From the testimony of the two witnesses it is impossible at this point to tell which one is telling the truth. The committee is taking every step to determine the true facts. The committee will have the investigative staff check on every possible corroborative detail, this to be implemented by daily executive sessions of two subcommittees meeting in Washington and other places.

"Testimony up to this point has been turned over and will be turned over to the U. S. Attorney, who is receiving the committee's complete co-operation.

"We are setting as a date of confrontation Wednesday, August 25, 10:30 a. m. We will resume the public hearings on the espionage case Tuesday, September 7. A statement in this connection will be made tomorrow afternoon."

Hiss Declines Statement

Hiss entered the committee hearing room about 1:30 p. m. (EST) and left at 4:35 (EST). When he

Youth, 16, Admits Slaying His Father

KENMORE, N. Y., Aug. 16. (AP)—A 16-year-old youth waived examination today when arraigned on a first degree murder charge in the fatal shooting of his father.

Police Chief Clarence E. Yochum said Edward S. Gogovan told him he shot his father, Edward J. Gogovan, 38, after the latter scolded his son last night for coming home "under the weather."

The father, a wholesale milk salesman in this western New York village, was shot in the lower abdomen, right cheek, back and right arm, medical examiner Aaron Wagner said. He died en route to a hospital.

Yochum said the youth told him of having between 17 and 20 glasses of beer in a tavern. The drinking, Yochum said, occurred after Edward returned from a weekend visit with his grandfather, Rev. John S. Carrie, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, Lockport.

"I drank until about 10:30, when I went home," Yochum quoted the youth as saying. "My dad accused me of being under the weather and we had an argument. I went and got my .22 rifle and put a clip in it and fired it all, seven or eight shots."

Yochum said Edward told him he was standing in the hall when he fired the shots at his father, who was standing 15 feet away, calling police.

Yochum added:

"His father dove under the dining room table after the first shot and Edward told me he fired at him every time he saw him come out from under the table."

Russian Planes Make Pass At British Craft

BERLIN, Aug. 16 (AP)—British authorities said two Russian Yak fighter planes made a pass tonight at a British passenger plane in the air.

The announcement said the two fighters flew directly at a British European Airways Viking Plane and broke away at a distance of only 100 feet. The British plane was en route to London.

The British said they filed an immediate protest with the Russians. The incident recalled a fatal collision between a Yak and a British transport plane over Berlin in April.

Dewey Campaign To Back Senators

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16 (AP) — Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's campaign manager said today the Republicans would devote "plenty of attention" to states where GOP Senatorial candidates face tough Democratic opposition.

Herbert Brownell, Jr., made that statement at a news conference after conferring for four hours with Dewey, the Republican Presidential nominee, and Gov. Earl Warren, California, Dewey's running mate.

Brownell also said that both Dewey and Warren would wage "very active campaigns and travel country-wide." He added that no final decisions have been reached as to when the campaign would open or where the candidates would speak.

Some states, Brownell said, probably will be visited by both the GOP nominees, with Dewey going to one major city and Warren to another.

When asked whether there would be emphasis in the campaign on states where the party's candidates for the Senate are expected to face close races, Brownell replied:

"We consider it a very important part of the campaign to strengthen and increase our majority in the Senate. I think it would be good speculation to say that states in which a close race is expected will get plenty of attention."

Senate Republicans now outnumber the Democrats 51 to 45. In a number of cases that margin has not been adequate because some of the members frequently have strayed from the party fold on various issues.

Doctor Sentenced In Woman's Death

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Aug. 16. (AP)—Dr. W. M. Lewis, 61-year-old Huntington physician convicted of second degree murder in the death of a woman from Narrows, Va., was sentenced to five to 18 years in prison today.

Common Pleas Judge H. Clay Warth overruled defense motions to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial. Lewis was convicted July 9 in the death of Mildred Ferguson, 23, on whom he had been accused of performing an abortion.

He was released under $10,000 bond for a 60-day stay pending appeal.

Nattily dressed in a striped blue suit, Lewis asked permission to speak after sentence was passed.

"Well, I'm sorry this had to come today," he told the court. "But you are sentencing an innocent man and I am glad of one thing—that I will stand before a court one day that will know I'm innocent and not guilty."

Julia Darling, his 29-year-old office assistant, is under indictment on murder and abortion charges and charges of swearing falsely and unlawfully administering an anesthetic. She is to be tried at the October term of court

Arab Army Opens Artillery In New Jerusalem Drive

Three Jews Wounded In Dawn Offensive

JERUSALEM, Aug. 16—(INS)—An Israeli communique said today that Arab troops launched another major attack with medium artillery and machine guns on the Jerusalem front this morning.

It was the second straight day of Arab-Jewish fighting in the Holy City area.

Israeli military leaders charged yesterday that Egyptian and Trans-Jordan troops provoked the biggest exchange of fire since the four-week-old truce began.

Three Jews Wounded

Today's Israeli communique said three Jews were wounded in a new Arab attack launched at dawn.

Other details, including Arab casualties, were not given out.

Residents of Jerusalem were awakened by the crash of medium artillery shells and the chattering of machineguns.

Israeli sources said that Trans-Jordan troops also began sniping at Jewish traffic along the main Jerusalem-Tel Aviv highway. There has been no activity in this area for several weeks.

The area in which the sniping broke out is about seven miles west of Jerusalem.

This is the only part of the highway as far as Bab El Wad where the Arabs still retain positions.

The continuing fighting coincided with reports of a widening rift in the Arab league camp in its Palestine policy.

Kaukji Resigns

The Israeli foreign office said it had received reports of the resignation of Fawzi El Kaukji as commander-in-chief of the "Palestine Army of Liberation."

Other sources said the resignation probably was the result of the withdrawal of support by Lebanon, which previously had backed his irregular Arab army of 6,000 to 8,000 men.

This army suffered reverses in the Nazareth and Haifa areas just before the current truce went into effect last month.

Two Britons were brought before a Jewish magistrate today to determine whether they should stand trial on charges of espionage and complicity in Jerusalem's Ben Yehuda Street blast which killed 54 persons last February 22.

They are Freder W. Sylvester, 31, and William G. Hawkins, 37.

Cancer Claims Life Of Great Yankee Hitter

Children Gather Outside Hospital To Await Message

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP)—Babe Ruth, who rose from the obscurity of an orphanage to become one of baseball's immortals, died tonight of cancer.

The once-mighty Yankee slugger, his frame and strength weakened by a long and painful illness, lapsed into unconsciousness shortly before death came to him—peacefully.

"The Babe," said a Catholic Priest at the bedside of the long-time home run king, "died a beautiful death."

"He said his prayers," the priest added, "and lapsed into a sleep—and he died in his sleep.

Dies At 7:01 P. M.

Death came to one of baseball's brightest stars at 7:01 p. m. (EST) in New York City's Memorial Hospital center for cancer and allied diseases.

At the end of Ruth's prayers, the priest, Rev. Thomas H. Kaufman of St. Catherine of Siena Parish, administered the last rites of the Catholic Church.

It was the Catholic Church which took over the training of George Herman Ruth when he was seven. Six years after Ruth entered the orphanage his mother died.

Tonight in the hospital room with Ruth at the time he died was a last tribute from the youngsters who, throughout the world, had idolized the Babe.

The final tribute, typical of the many which had come from Ruth's millions of admirers, was a wreath of 37 orchids, fashioned in the shape of an Hawaiian lei.

With the wreath came a message from Hawaiian school children who sent their "best wishes for speedy recovery to our all-time baseball favorite."

The flowers were shown to Ruth before he became unconscious. He said nothing.

Ill Nearly Two Years

Throughout Ruth's long illness of nearly two years, the exact nature of his sickness never had been disclosed. But tonight, Dr. Hayes Martin, the Babe's personal physician, announced that Ruth's death was caused by cancer.

Throughout the day Ruth's condition had grown steadily worse. His fever had soared, and he had been unable to take nourishment.

Yet only the previous day he had surprised everyone by leaving his bed and sitting in a nearby easy chair for a 20-minute visit with relatives and intimate friends.

Ruth had been on the critical list since last Wednesday. Much of the time since then his wife, Claire, and other relatives had been at the hospital with him.

At the bedside when Ruth died were his physician, the priest, another physician, Dr. Loton Rasmussen, and two male nurses, Frank Delaney and George Moser.

Among the relatives at the hospital were his wife, his two adopted daughters, Mrs. Daniel Sullivan, New York and Mrs. Richard Flanders, North Conway, N. H.; his sister, Mrs. Wilbur Moberly, Baltimore, and two long-time intimate friends, James Chapman and J. Paul Carey.

Children Gather

Outside the hospital at the time of Ruth's death were more than a hundred children.

They had gathered in the afternoon. When word of his death came, they moved away quietly—speaking in hushed tones.

Meat Boycott Gets Temporary Setback

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. Aug. 16 (AP)—A butcher shop boycott led locally by Mrs. Luther E. Bass has suffered a slight setback.

Mrs. Bass said she had to break her pledge not to buy any more meat until prices come down. She bought a steak today.

"My husband said he has lost five pounds since we quit serving meat," she confessed to a reporter. "He served notice he was to have meat."

Two Sex Maniacs Sought In Fla. Beach Slaying

ORMOND, Fla., Aug. 16 (AP)—All law enforcement officers in Florida were asked tonight to check for two sex maniacs in a search for the slayers of Mary Hucks and her escort, Gregory Bount.

Four negroes, who were questioned in connection with the Saturday night rape of the attractive East Point, Ga., stenographer and killing of the couple, were released tonight.

Four white men are being questioned at Sarasota, across the state on the Gulf Coast, and Sheriff Alex Littlefield is en route there.

Circulars, mailed by the sheriff's office to police throughout the state said two men are being sought, one wearing size 12 shoes and the other size seven.

They are believed to be scratched and their clothing would be torn by underbrush and possibly sandy, the circular continued. It asked all night patrolmen within 250 miles to be particularly alert.

Detective Walter Braren said a report from a Daytona Beach Hotel is considered an active clue.

Sgt. J. S. Matthews quoted R. E. Mercer, night clerk of the Bayview Hotel, as saying a tall man with bloodstains on his clothes and a scratched faced asked for a $6 room about 3:30 a. m. Sunday.

When told none was available, the man asked directions to the bus station and left in an automobile, also occupied by another man, Matthews said Mercer reported.

The victims were shot and killed with a .22 caliber pistol on a moonlit beach about half a mile from the nearest cottages.

The statement was distributed by Lomakin shortly after 7 p. m. in the foyer of the impressive Soviet consulate just off Fifth Avenue in 61st Street.

Newsmen Summoned

Sixty newsmen and camera men, summoned for the conference, were waiting on the sidewalk when the heavy, wrought iron doors of the consulate were finally opened to them.

The youthful consul, smiling, assured and self confident, said to reporters crowded around him:

"Today, you have submitted to me many questions for answering. This is my answer."

With that, Lomakin held up a batch of two-page statements in English, while another member of the consulate distributed the same

Diplomats Silent As Meeting Ends

MOSCOW, Aug. 16 (AP)—Envoys of the United States, Britain and France met with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov again tonight in the current negotiations to settle East-West differences in Berlin and Germany.

The meeting in the walled Kremlin was the longest since the negotiations began July 31, lasting three hours and 40 minutes. None of the Western diplomats would comment as they left the Kremlin. They refused even to state whether they thought there would be another meeting.

Visit British Embassy

U. S. Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith and French Ambassador Yves Chataigneau went immediately to the British Embassy with Britain's Special Envoy, Frank Roberts, for a conference.

Smith seemed in good spirits as he sent his chauffeur to get something to eat. But the envoys themselves went right into the meeting without stopping for food.

(A responsible diplomatic informant in London said Molotov was to give Russia's reply to the Western proposals for a Berlin settlement at today's meeting. He said the Western proposals had been "rehashed but not modified" and added today's talk might be the climax of the 18-day East-West discussions.

(In Frankfurt, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor in Germany, said he expected the Western powers to remain firm on their plans for Germany in the Moscow talks.)

Makes Sixth Meeting

Tonight's conference was the sixth with Molotov. The Western envoys met with the Soviet Foreign Minister July 31. He was present also at the August 2 meeting with Prime Minister Stalin, which was followed by meetings with Molotov on August 6, August 9 and August 12.

The three Western diplomats met among themselves at the British Embassy before they left for the Kremlin at 5:45 p. m., Moscow time (9:45 a. m. EST.) They returned to the British Embassy at 9:43 p. m.

Grand Jury Seeks Legal Gambling

LA PLATA, Md., Aug. 16. (AP)—The grand jury today recommended legalized slot machines, bingo and raffles for Charles County.

Recalled at its own request for a special one-day investigation, the jury also reported it would seek state police aid "to clean up the gambling and liquor situation in this county."

"The state police should be asked to lend whatever assistance to the sheriff's office as is needed to clean up the gambling situation in Charles County, which most everyone seems to know is getting progressively worse but about which the grand jury has been able to secure no evidence or witnesses," said the report signed by Foreman Foster M. Reeder.

It said the grand jury "is writing" Col. Beverly Ober, State Police Superintendent, "asking that the support of his department be given the sheriff's office."

The report said Sheriff Elmer M. Quade and four deputies appeared before the jury at its seven-hour session and "some admitted that gambling is going on but presented no definite evidence and no names as all they knew was hearsay."

The May Term Grand Jury, in its report May 19, charged "flagrant and widespread disregard of gambling and liquor laws," and blamed the county's "duly elected enforcement officers."

'Tokyo Rose' To Face Treason Count In U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP)—The Justice Department today decided to go to bat with a treason prosecution in the so-called "Tokyo Rose" broadcasts of World War II.

Attorney General Tom Clark asked U. S. Army authorities in Tokyo to arrest 32-year-old Iva Toguri D'Aquino and send her to San Francisco to face a Federal Grand Jury there "at as early a date as possible."

The action climaxes more than three years of investigation. The inquiry, Clark said, indicated that Mrs. D'Aquino, born in Los Angeles July 4, 1916, was one of six English-speaking Japanese women who broadcast over radio Tokyo between 1943 and 1945.

The Attorney General said she was the only American-born woman in the group to which the American Armed Forces in the Far East applied the collective nickname "Tokyo Rose."

The feminine broadcasts over Tokyo's powerful radio station became a legend among U. S. fighting men in the desolate places of the Pacific, to which they were beamed.

The programs were elaborately planned. Soft-voiced and sexy in appeal, they were employed as nightly reminders to American combat men on lonely islands of what they were missing by not turning around and going back home.

Often, the broadcasts included imaginary descriptions of the scenes in famous American good-time centers, with heavy emphasis on how much fun stay-at-homes were having.

Throughout the war, the Japanese women broadcasters used the latest American dance recordings as a backdrop for their patter.

Just how radio Tokyo got this up-to-the-minute stuff has never been fully explained.

Truth Of Hiss Statement Is Still In Doubt

Spy Probers Set Aug. 25 Meeting To Get All Facts

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP)—The House Un-American Activities Committee investigating reports of Communist spies in the government quizzed Alger Hiss for three hours today and reported it still doesn't know whether he or his accuser is telling the truth.

Hiss, former State Department official, has been accused by Whittaker Chambers, an admitted-ex-Communist, of being a member of an "elite" Communist movement in Washington in the early 1930's. Hiss has denied it and testified that he never knew Chambers.

Hiss was questioned in private today.

The committee set August 25 for Hiss and Chambers to come face to face with their contrary stories. Whether this session will be open to the public has not been decided, Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R-NJ), told reporters.

To Resume Open Hearings

Meanwhile, the committee's spy investigation will continue through subcommittees, with public hearings to be resumed September 7.

Since the original Chambers accusation and the Hiss denial under oath in public hearing, the committee has questioned both men behind closed doors. After Hiss' turn today he declined to comment to reporters but Committee Chairman Thomas made this statement:

"From the testimony of the two witnesses it is impossible at this point to tell which one is telling the truth. The committee is taking every step to determine the true facts. The committee will have the investigative staff check on every possible corroborative detail, this to be implemented by daily executive sessions of two subcommittees meeting in Washington and other places.

"Testimony up to this point has been turned over and will be turned over to the U. S. Attorney, who is receiving the committee's complete co-operation.

"We are setting as a date of confrontation Wednesday, August 25, 10:30 a. m. We will resume the public hearings on the espionage case Tuesday, September 7. A statement in this connection will be made tomorrow afternoon."

Hiss Declines Statement

Hiss entered the committee hearing room about 1:30 p. m. (EST) and left at 4:35 (EST). When he

Youth, 16, Admits Slaying His Father

KENMORE, N. Y., Aug. 16. (AP)—A 16-year-old youth waived examination today when arraigned on a first degree murder charge in the fatal shooting of his father.

Police Chief Clarence E. Yochum said Edward S. Gogovan told him he shot his father, Edward J. Gogovan, 38, after the latter scolded his son last night for coming home "under the weather."

The father, a wholesale milk salesman in this western New York village, was shot in the lower abdomen, right cheek, back and right arm, medical examiner Aaron Wagner said. He died en route to a hospital.

Yochum said the youth told him of having between 17 and 20 glasses of beer in a tavern. The drinking, Yochum said, occurred after Edward returned from a weekend visit with his grandfather, Rev. John S. Carrie, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, Lockport.

"I drank until about 10:30, when I went home," Yochum quoted the youth as saying. "My dad accused me of being under the weather and we had an argument. I went and got my .22 rifle and put a clip in it and fired it all, seven or eight shots."

Yochum said Edward told him he was standing in the hall when he fired the shots at his father, who was standing 15 feet away, calling police.

Yochum added:

"His father dove under the dining room table after the first shot and Edward told me he fired at him every time he saw him come out from under the table."

BASEBALL'S GREAT--(AP) Wirephoto) Babe Ruth, idol of millions of baseball fans died last night at 7:10 p. m. (EST) in New York after suffering from a throat ailment for almost two years. The 53-year-old home run king was suffering from cancer, an attending physician said.

Russian Planes Make Pass At British Craft

BERLIN, Aug. 16 (AP)—British authorities said two Russian Yak fighter planes made a pass tonight at a British passenger plane in the air.

The announcement said the two fighters flew directly at a British European Airways Viking Plane and broke away at a distance of only 100 feet. The British plane was en route to London.

The British said they filed an immediate protest with the Russians. The incident recalled a fatal collision between a Yak and a British transport plane over Berlin in April.

Dewey Campaign To Back Senators

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16 (AP) — Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's campaign manager said today the Republicans would devote "plenty of attention" to states where GOP Senatorial candidates face tough Democratic opposition.

Herbert Brownell, Jr., made that statement at a news conference after conferring for four hours with Dewey, the Republican Presidential nominee, and Gov. Earl Warren, California, Dewey's running mate.

Brownell also said that both Dewey and Warren would wage "very active campaigns and travel country-wide." He added that no final decisions have been reached as to when the campaign would open or where the candidates would speak.

Some states, Brownell said, probably will be visited by both the GOP nominees, with Dewey going to one major city and Warren to another.

When asked whether there would be emphasis in the campaign on states where the party's candidates for the Senate are expected to face close races, Brownell replied:

"We consider it a very important part of the campaign to strengthen and increase our majority in the Senate. I think it would be good speculation to say that states in which a close race is expected will get plenty of attention."

Senate Republicans now outnumber the Democrats 51 to 45. In a number of cases that margin has not been adequate because some of the members frequently have strayed from the party fold on various issues.

Doctor Sentenced In Woman's Death

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Aug. 16. (AP)—Dr. W. M. Lewis, 61-year-old Huntington physician convicted of second degree murder in the death of a woman from Narrows, Va., was sentenced to five to 18 years in prison today.

Common Pleas Judge H. Clay Warth overruled defense motions to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial. Lewis was convicted July 9 in the death of Mildred Ferguson, 23, on whom he had been accused of performing an abortion.

He was released under $10,000 bond for a 60-day stay pending appeal.

Nattily dressed in a striped blue suit, Lewis asked permission to speak after sentence was passed.

"Well, I'm sorry this had to come today," he told the court. "But you are sentencing an innocent man and I am glad of one thing—that I will stand before a court one day that will know I'm innocent and not guilty."

Julia Darling, his 29-year-old office assistant, is under indictment on murder and abortion charges and charges of swearing falsely and unlawfully administering an anesthetic. She is to be tried at the October term of court

Three Jews Wounded In Dawn Offensive

JERUSALEM, Aug. 16—(INS)—An Israeli communique said today that Arab troops launched another major attack with medium artillery and machine guns on the Jerusalem front this morning.

It was the second straight day of Arab-Jewish fighting in the Holy City area.

Israeli military leaders charged yesterday that Egyptian and Trans-Jordan troops provoked the biggest exchange of fire since the four-week-old truce began.

Three Jews Wounded

Today's Israeli communique said three Jews were wounded in a new Arab attack launched at dawn.

Other details, including Arab casualties, were not given out.

Residents of Jerusalem were awakened by the crash of medium artillery shells and the chattering of machineguns.

Israeli sources said that Trans-Jordan troops also began sniping at Jewish traffic along the main Jerusalem-Tel Aviv highway. There has been no activity in this area for several weeks.

The area in which the sniping broke out is about seven miles west of Jerusalem.

This is the only part of the highway as far as Bab El Wad where the Arabs still retain positions.

Kaukji Resigns

The Israeli foreign office said it had received reports of the resignation of Fawzi El Kaukji as commander-in-chief of the "Palestine Army of Liberation."

Other sources said the resignation probably was the result of the withdrawal of support by Lebanon, which previously had backed his irregular Arab army of 6,000 to 8,000 men.

This army suffered reverses in the Nazareth and Haifa areas just before the current truce went into effect last month.

Two Britons were brought before a Jewish magistrate today to determine whether they should stand trial on charges of espionage and complicity in Jerusalem's Ben Yehuda Street blast which killed 54 persons last February 22.

They are Freder W. Sylvester, 31, and William G. Hawkins, 37.

Cancer Claims Life Of Great Yankee Hitter

Children Gather Outside Hospital To Await Message

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP)—Babe Ruth, who rose from the obscurity of an orphanage to become one of baseball's immortals, died tonight of cancer.

The once-mighty Yankee slugger, his frame and strength weakened by a long and painful illness, lapsed into unconsciousness shortly before death came to him—peacefully.

"The Babe," said a Catholic Priest at the bedside of the long-time home run king, "died a beautiful death."

"He said his prayers," the priest added, "and lapsed into a sleep—and he died in his sleep.

Dies At 7:01 P. M.

Death came to one of baseball's brightest stars at 7:01 p. m. (EST) in New York City's Memorial Hospital center for cancer and allied diseases.

At the end of Ruth's prayers, the priest, Rev. Thomas H. Kaufman of St. Catherine of Siena Parish, administered the last rites of the Catholic Church.

It was the Catholic Church which took over the training of George Herman Ruth when he was seven. Six years after Ruth entered the orphanage his mother died.

Tonight in the hospital room with Ruth at the time he died was a last tribute from the youngsters who, throughout the world, had idolized the Babe.

The final tribute, typical of the many which had come from Ruth's millions of admirers, was a wreath of 37 orchids, fashioned in the shape of an Hawaiian lei.

With the wreath came a message from Hawaiian school children who sent their "best wishes for speedy recovery to our all-time baseball favorite."

Ill Nearly Two Years

Throughout Ruth's long illness of nearly two years, the exact nature of his sickness never had been disclosed. But tonight, Dr. Hayes Martin, the Babe's personal physician, announced that Ruth's death was caused by cancer.

Throughout the day Ruth's condition had grown steadily worse. His fever had soared, and he had been unable to take nourishment.

Yet only the previous day he had surprised everyone by leaving his bed and sitting in a nearby easy chair for a 20-minute visit with relatives and intimate friends.

Ruth had been on the critical list since last Wednesday. Much of the time since then his wife, Claire, and other relatives had been at the hospital with him.

At the bedside when Ruth died were his physician, the priest, another physician, Dr. Loton Rasmussen, and two male nurses, Frank Delaney and George Moser.

Among the relatives at the hospital were his wife, his two adopted daughters, Mrs. Daniel Sullivan, New York and Mrs. Richard Flanders, North Conway, N. H.; his sister, Mrs. Wilbur Moberly, Baltimore, and two long-time intimate friends, James Chapman and J. Paul Carey.

Children Gather

Outside the hospital at the time of Ruth's death were more than a hundred children.

They had gathered in the afternoon. When word of his death came, they moved away quietly—speaking in hushed tones.

Meat Boycott Gets Temporary Setback

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. Aug. 16 (AP)—A butcher shop boycott led locally by Mrs. Luther E. Bass has suffered a slight setback.

Mrs. Bass said she had to break her pledge not to buy any more meat until prices come down. She bought a steak today.

"My husband said he has lost five pounds since we quit serving meat," she confessed to a reporter. "He served notice he was to have meat."

Two Sex Maniacs Sought In Fla. Beach Slaying

ORMOND, Fla., Aug. 16 (AP)—All law enforcement officers in Florida were asked tonight to check for two sex maniacs in a search for the slayers of Mary Hucks and her escort, Gregory Bount.

Four negroes, who were questioned in connection with the Saturday night rape of the attractive East Point, Ga., stenographer and killing of the couple, were released tonight.

Four white men are being questioned at Sarasota, across the state on the Gulf Coast, and Sheriff Alex Littlefield is en route there.

Circulars, mailed by the sheriff's office to police throughout the state said two men are being sought, one wearing size 12 shoes and the other size seven.

They are believed to be scratched and their clothing would be torn by underbrush and possibly sandy, the circular continued. It asked all night patrolmen within 250 miles to be particularly alert.

Detective Walter Braren said a report from a Daytona Beach Hotel is considered an active clue.

Sgt. J. S. Matthews quoted R. E. Mercer, night clerk of the Bayview Hotel, as saying a tall man with bloodstains on his clothes and a scratched faced asked for a $6 room about 3:30 a. m. Sunday.

When told none was available, the man asked directions to the bus station and left in an automobile, also occupied by another man, Matthews said Mercer reported.

The victims were shot and killed with a .22 caliber pistol on a moonlit beach about half a mile from the nearest cottages.

Wainwright Urges UMT To Halt War In DAV Address

Recalls Suffering On Bataan, Corregidor

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—(INS)—Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright recalled the defeat and suffering of American forces on Bataan and Corrregidor today as examples of why the United States needs a program of Universal Military Training.

The hero of Bataan spoke at the opening session of the 28th annual convention of Disabled American Veterans.

The little band of soldiers—some on crutches and in wheel chairs, others blind or disease-ridden—listened tensely as Wainwright, made deaf by an exploding Japanese shell, warned against a "Pacifist program."

The famed "Skinny" Wainwright told the 1,000 delegates who are expected to elect him D. A. V. National Chairman:

"The terrific price in lives and blood of that (Bataan) campaign resulted from a pacifist program which left the nation unprepared.

"The men who surrendered with me did not fail for lack of loyalty or patriotism or courage. We surrendered because of lack of guns and ammunition, and ships and planes and food."

He added:

"It just isn't fair, it just isn't decent, for a rich and great nation to allow its youth and potential defenders to grow into manhood without U.M.T., or to ask its youth to protect it, without being equipped with the most modern weapons and munitions of warfare."

The noted general asserted that the "trained soldier has four to six times the chances of survival than the untrained soldier."

Those in the audience who had hands clapped and those without hands stamped their feet in approval when Wainwright concluded:

"There need be no World War III if only America accepts the now-known causes of both world wars and acts accordingly. Unpreparedness paved the way for both criminal assaults."

Greeks Capture Top Of Grammos Mountains

Monnett's Aces Win

Monnett's Aces defeated Allegany Grove in a softball game yesterday at Allegany Grove by the score of 11-6. Darkness halted the contest in the 6th inning. Jack Burkett rapped a triple and single for the Grovers and Cecil and McKenzie garnered a three-bagger and double apiece for the Aces. McKenzie pitched for the winners and Burkett was on the mound for the winners.

Polio Epidemic Is Raging In North Carolina

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 16 (AP) — As 33 more cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the State Board of Health today, the board reported that the state's worst polio epidemic has taken a toll of 78 lives.

Today's cases brought the total of cases for the year to 1,497, the August total to 231 and the July total to 849 cases.

cribed as a throat ailment. The following month, however, July 26, he left his sick bed to attend the world premier of "The Babe Ruth Story," a movie based on his life.

Tonight, Father Kaufman was asked if Ruth knew he was dying and he said:

"The Babe has been prepared since July 21 for his death."

In his 22 years as a major league baseball player, Ruth established 76 records and 62 of them still stand today. In regular games, he had hit a total of 708 home runs.

He had started his baseball career as a pitcher—but his hitting power made him more valuable as an outfielder, a position that carried his slugging prowess into every game.

The last flash of his greatness came 13 years ago in Pittsburgh as Ruth closed out his career with the Boston Braves. In three times at the plate, he pounded out three home runs.

departed reporters and photographers followed him down the hall and asked for a statement.

"I am not going to make any statement now," Hiss told them. "Any statement must come from the committee."

Thomas was asked whether Hiss had been instructed not to talk. Thomas said the committee gave Hiss no instructions and Rep Hebert (D-La) added:

"In fact, we told him he could make any statement he liked."

Hiss now heads the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Chambers is a Time Magazine editor who said he renounced Communism in 1937.

Chambers said that he had visited at Hiss' home as a Communist, whereas Hiss said he had never "laid eyes on" Chambers before the current hearings.

Truman Signs

Whatever rules the board puts out will not go into effect until 30 days after they are issued.

The President officially set his campaign course while the groundwork was being laid for a rousing autumn row over taxes.

Mr. Truman himself opened up that issue afresh over the weekend with a statement in his budget review that Republican tax cuts for 1948 were "ill timed." He said the government is headed for a period of treasury deficits at a time of high income and blamed the tax reduction. He suggested that the cut made for more inflation.

Two Insurance Men Held In Tax Evasion

BALTIMORE, Aug. 16. (AP)—Two local insurance men are indicted by the grand jury today on charges of failing to file 1947 state income tax returns.

The prosecutions were the first instituted since State Comptroller James J Lacy announced recently a drive for full compliance with the tax law.

Names of the accused were withheld under court rules which forbid publications of the names of defendants until they are in custody or bail has been arranged.

As to an eventual peace treaty, he said, "our government has always hoped for a quadripartite treaty."

statement in Russian.

But reporters who had hopefully handed in pertinent, pointed and reasoned questions on the Kosenkia case quickly discovered that the statement was just a rehash of charges already laid down in previous statements regarding the school teacher who insists she wants to stay in America.

The statement concerning Mrs. Kosenkina, still in critical condition and under heavy police guard at Roosevelt Hospital, bristled with ringing, dated cliches.

Although Lomakin, cheerful and seemingly pleased with life and with himself, refused to answer questions, he posed willingly for pictures in the consulate foyer, in which there were half as many guards and brawny young officials as there were news men.

As consulate guards quickly shooed reporters out the big front door, a reporter asked Vice-Consul Zot L. Chepurnykh, who visited the teacher in Roosevelt Hospital last Friday, if he intended to visit her again.

Chepurnykh replied that not only did he intend to see Mrs. Kosenkina—"probably tomorrow"—but that he would be accompanied by Consul Lomakin.

There has been no indication in Moscow as to how the talks are going. The Western diplomats have been silent on the progress of the conferences throughout the prolonged negotiations.

Monnett's Aces Win

Monnett's Aces defeated Allegany Grove in a softball game yesterday at Allegany Grove by the score of 11-6. Darkness halted the contest in the 6th inning. Jack Burkett rapped a triple and single for the Grovers and Cecil and McKenzie garnered a three-bagger and double apiece for the Aces. McKenzie pitched for the winners and Burkett was on the mound for the winners.

Polio Epidemic Is Raging In North Carolina

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 16 (AP) — As 33 more cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the State Board of Health today, the board reported that the state's worst polio epidemic has taken a toll of 78 lives.

Today's cases brought the total of cases for the year to 1,497, the August total to 231 and the July total to 849 cases.

cribed as a throat ailment. The following month, however, July 26, he left his sick bed to attend the world premier of "The Babe Ruth Story," a movie based on his life.

Tonight, Father Kaufman was asked if Ruth knew he was dying and he said:

"The Babe has been prepared since July 21 for his death."

In his 22 years as a major league baseball player, Ruth established 76 records and 62 of them still stand today. In regular games, he had hit a total of 708 home runs.

He had started his baseball career as a pitcher—but his hitting power made him more valuable as an outfielder, a position that carried his slugging prowess into every game.

The last flash of his greatness came 13 years ago in Pittsburgh as Ruth closed out his career with the Boston Braves. In three times at the plate, he pounded out three home runs.

departed reporters and photographers followed him down the hall and asked for a statement.

"I am not going to make any statement now," Hiss told them. "Any statement must come from the committee."

Thomas was asked whether Hiss had been instructed not to talk. Thomas said the committee gave Hiss no instructions and Rep Hebert (D-La) added:

"In fact, we told him he could make any statement he liked."

Hiss now heads the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Chambers is a Time Magazine editor who said he renounced Communism in 1937.

Chambers said that he had visited at Hiss' home as a Communist, whereas Hiss said he had never "laid eyes on" Chambers before the current hearings.

Truman Signs

Whatever rules the board puts out will not go into effect until 30 days after they are issued.

The President officially set his campaign course while the groundwork was being laid for a rousing autumn row over taxes.

Mr. Truman himself opened up that issue afresh over the weekend with a statement in his budget review that Republican tax cuts for 1948 were "ill timed." He said the government is headed for a period of treasury deficits at a time of high income and blamed the tax reduction. He suggested that the cut made for more inflation.

Two Insurance Men Held In Tax Evasion

BALTIMORE, Aug. 16. (AP)—Two local insurance men are indicted by the grand jury today on charges of failing to file 1947 state income tax returns.

The prosecutions were the first instituted since State Comptroller James J Lacy announced recently a drive for full compliance with the tax law.

Names of the accused were withheld under court rules which forbid publications of the names of defendants until they are in custody or bail has been arranged.

Clay indicated the West will continue with plans for formation of a Western German state until such time as there could be a unified Germany reflecting the political and economic views of the German people. As to an eventual peace treaty, he said, "our government has always hoped for a quadripartite treaty."

Russians Give

statement in Russian.

But reporters who had hopefully handed in pertinent, pointed and reasoned questions on the Kosenkia case quickly discovered that the statement was just a rehash of charges already laid down in previous statements regarding the school teacher who insists she wants to stay in America.

The statement concerning Mrs. Kosenkina, still in critical condition and under heavy police guard at Roosevelt Hospital, bristled with ringing, dated cliches.

Although Lomakin, cheerful and seemingly pleased with life and with himself, refused to answer questions, he posed willingly for pictures in the consulate foyer, in which there were half as many guards and brawny young officials as there were news men.

As consulate guards quickly shooed reporters out the big front door, a reporter asked Vice-Consul Zot L. Chepurnykh, who visited the teacher in Roosevelt Hospital last Friday, if he intended to visit her again.

Chepurnykh replied that not only did he intend to see Mrs. Kosenkina—"probably tomorrow"—but that he would be accompanied by Consul Lomakin.

Americans Dig For Etruscan Ruins

ROME (AP)—A group of Americans are digging into the ruins of a 2,600-year-old city near here in search of missing links in language and origin of the ancient Etruscan civilization.

"With a piece of luck," says Prof. Frank Edward Brown, on leave from Yale University, "we may find the long-sought key to the Etruscan language." This in turn might help reveal the native origin of the Etrusci whose civilization reached its height in Central and Northern Italy about 500 B. C.

Brown, head of classical studies at the American Academy of Rome, last May began a surface survey and mapping of the ancient city of Cos, 85 miles north of Rome, which was captured by Romans about 273 B. C.

The Romans built a fortified town on the site of Cos. The archaeologists will probe beneath the Roman ruins into the Etruscan city. A test excavation early this year uncovered a temple to Jupiter, Juno and Minerva, a bas-relief of a woman and valuable pottery and gold works. Brown estimated the excavations will require about ten years.

Working with Brown are Doris Taylor, 31, of (R.R.No.1) Noblesville, Ind.; Robert E. Hecht, Jr., 29, of (3809 Juniper Rd.) Baltimore, Md., and Lawrence Richardson, 27, of (19 Ware St.) Cambridge, Mass., all American Academy students.

The only municipally owned archaeological project in the United States is Pueblo Grande, about four miles east of Phoenix.

Truman Continues Cocky In His Wrong-Headedness

If he were not so cocky in his wrong-headedness, Mr. Truman would deserve public sympathy for the quality of political advice he has been getting.

Whoever put him up to the notion of calling the inquiry into pro-Russian activities a "red herring" did the President no service, political or otherwise. Leaving aside the still incomplete hearings on espionage, what the Administration must explain is why men who were known to be under investigation for disloyalty were given high positions in Government and moved about from one post to another.

The low point of Truman ineptitude was his reiteration a few days ago that the congressional study was a red herring "with the strongest kind of smell," at the very time that the unfortunate Mrs. Kosenkina was leaping from the third-floor window of the Soviet Consulate in New York, where she now says she had been kept prisoner, because she was terrified of being returned to Russia. The American people have seen no more dramatic evidence of Soviet tyranny than the desperate effort of this woman to escape its clutches even at the risk of death.

Of course, Congress was not responsible for the desire of the two Russian school teachers to seek refuge and freedom in the United States. But the Thomas committee had just announced that it wanted to question both about Soviet spying in this country. The whole inquiry has been hampered at every step by President Truman.

Even as the President was smearing the House Committee on un-American Affairs, Molotov was accusing American officials of "kidnaping" the two Russians school teachers, and a Pravda commentator was charging the FBI with conspiracy with the "White Guard" against Soviet citizens in America. Perhaps Mr. Truman can find satisfaction in Henry Wallace's enthusiastic indorsement of his attack on the congressional inquiry at this time.

A foul odor is certainly rising from Washington, and its not from the headquarters of the un-American Activities Committee.

GOP V. P. Candidate Issues Weighty Statement

The nearest approach to a political statement that has come from the national candidates of either major party since their nomination was that given by Earl Warren Governor of California and Governor Dewey's running mate. It appeared in the Saturday Evening Post a day or so ago, and called for "decentralization of authority, because the strength of the republic depends largely on the virility of the state and local governments."

While Gov. Warren pays his respects to "the top-heavy expensive government bureaus that are a public burden today," their greatest evil is "the fact that they get farther and farther away from the people."

Republicans generally will indorse this statement, and so will "Dixiecrats," who base their exodus on the contention that the 1948 Democratic platform proposed to make the nation master of matters which the Constitution explicitly reserved to the states. Federal trespass on the rights of the states, in its modern phases, began with the New Deal, reaching such heights that the array of Washington officeholders in almost every state outnumbered by as much as three to one their own employes.

One of the most vital features of the American Republic is its federated system. Unknown to the ancient world and substantially an American creation, it has solved the problem of territorial bigness which proved fatal to the great rambling empires of antiquity. Save for defense, foreign and interstate commerce, and the several safeguards of the Bill of Rights, American states were made masters of their own destinies, free to experiment—and if need be to revoke their experiments.

The system has worked well. Centralized bureaucratic domination from Washington—remote control, instead of from, and at, the "grass roots"—is not American.

Fantastic Profits Made On "Gift" Packages To Europe

Fantastic profits have been made on gift packages sold by private firms for shipment to Europe, a former American Military Government official charges. Earl Reinsel former chief of property control for AMG in Germany, said that last year Americans sent 22,000,000 such packages at a cost of a quarter of a billion dollars. That, he said, is double what they should have paid.

These charges do not affect charitable agencies like CARE, Mr Reinsel emphasized. While he thinks some details of their organization could be improved, he says CARE has "done a splendid job under adverse circumstances." And there are many private firms that are not profiteering on gift-package shipments.

But that is more than he is willing to say about the firms who have placed large advertisements in New York newspapers offering to send gift packages abroad. One such package, Mr. Reinsel says, sells for $10.95 and contains food and commodities that would retail at only $5.32. Even if the sender bought them over the counter and mailed them himself, the total cost including postage would be only $7.85. Since this includes a fair profit on each item, it seems to follow that the $10.95 prices includes a profit of 60 to 65 per cent on total costs plus overhead.

Under any circumstances, profits on this sale are unhealthy, and tend to undermine the normal workings of the free enterprise system. But when they are made through appeals to humanitarian feelings, they are outrageous.

Mr Reinsel should have his facts straight; he left Germany only six weeks ago. He said the Communists were making the most of the poor quality of much of the stuff ("coffee undrinkable and soap unusable") and telling the Germans that this is the normal working of capitalism.

For the average American, the best solution is to play safe and make such shipments through CARE or some other non-profit agency until the situation clears up.

Science finds that rats will starve in sight of food rather than use a new way of getting it. They must be communists.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Bleeding Requires Investigation

Bleeding from the rectum is usually indicative of trouble which may or may not be serious. Although cancer is a possibility there is no need to become overly disturbed because other conditions can also bring on the symptom. The only sure way to find out is to submit to examination.

Dr. Van Dellen

Hemorrhoids are the best possibility but, during the last decade, physicians have learned to investigate further. Many persons have piles and their mere presence does not necessarily mean that blood is arising from this source. All too often another lesion co-exists which is in reality the main site of trouble.

Before the medico is satisfied with the diagnosis "bleeding hemorrhoids," therefore, he is likely to suggest a more thorough checkup. A request such as this should never be denied because hospital records of individuals with cancer, polyps, and other types of tumors frequently reveal that bleeding has been blamed on piles. In one large clinic, a study revealed that one in four patients with rectal cancer told of being treated for something else before the actual disorder was detected. Th additional examination had not been carried out and when the sufferer failed to improve after the hemorrhoids had been treated, the real cause was found ultimately.

Although such occurences are not common, failing to do the job right often has serious implications. Even though hemorrhoids are the most frequent source of rectal bleeding, it always pays to make certain. In this way, the condition can be managed as it should.

Many instruments have been devised for examining this part of the body. They are not new but during the last several decades, improvements have been made so that they no longer resemdle the crude gadgets used in the past. With the proctoscope, for example, the rectum can be visualized. Tumors, cancer, polyps, ulcers, and infection can be recognized and guesswork is no longer required. When the exact bleeding point is seen, there can be no doubt as to the origin of the flow. Statistics show that one out of every 17 patients with rectal trouble have cancer. This is not a high percentage but serves to demonstrate why we are fortunate in having instruments of this type because the lesions can be discovered in their early stages.

•—•—•

Polyps also produce bleeding. These little miniature punching bags hanging from the walls are easily injured and, in this part of our anatomy, are more serious than those elsewhere because of their tendency to become malignant. They can be removed readily electrically unless located high in the intestine where they cannot be reached with the instrument. When extirpated they do not recur but new ones can develop. They do not always become cancerous but the possibility exists; therefore, no one should take chances. This is demonstrated vividly by a recent report on 200 patients with this condition; all but 4 followed the physician's advice and had them removed; the others refused and, during the next three years, the sufferers all returned to his office. It was discovered that the polyps had become cancerous.

BLEEDING FROM LUNGS

E. M. writes: What other condition besides tuberculosis could cause hemorrhage from the chest region?

Reply

Bronchiectasis, abscess, wounds, pneumonia, cancer, certain heart conditions, and blood clots should be investigated. Tuberculosis, however, is the most common cause.

DON'T WORRY

Mrs. C. writes: Will cutting hairs off the chin with a scissors cause cancer?

Reply

No, and I don't know why it should even be considered. After all, men have been shaving for a long time without the development of cancer from this cause.

KIDNEY STONE

M. E. H. writes: What is renal colic?

Reply

It is the distress produced when a kidney stone is attempting to pass. Pain is not only excruciating but if the "pebble" becomes imbedded and blocks the passageway, the urine cannot flow. This is a serious complication because such obstruction may damage the kidneys.

EXTREMELY SO

V. T. writes: Is shingles painful?

Reply

And how.

UNLIKELY

H. T. writes: Can the phlebitis germ be picked up by a patient from a hospital bed?

Reply

No, as phlebitis is not contagious; it usually originates from bacterial nests within the body.

OTHER CLEWS

Mrs. C. writes: Is it possible for a physician to tell whether a woman is pregnant merely by taking her blood pressure?

Reply

No, and neither will a urinalysis prove diagnostic. Both of these tests are made at frequent intervals during pregnancy, however, because they offer clews as to whether toxemia is developing.

SINUS INFECTION

R. E. writes: Does sinus disease ever cause indigestion?

Reply

Although the two conditions are unrelated, infection in any part of the body may disturb digestion.

ANY OTHER GAME YOU BOYS PLAY?

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16—Speaker Joe Martin and Senator Alben Barkley are on the opposite sides of the political fence, but, meeting by accident at a social function the other day, Speaker Martin went up to Barkley and said:

"Senator, I am sorry I have not had the opportunity to congratulate you on the high honor that your party has seen fit to bestow upon you."

"Well, you know it reminds me of the story of the man who had two sons," replied Senator Barkley. "One of them became a sailor and went to sea, the other became Vice President and he hasn't heard from either one of them since."

Navy's Obsolete Court-Martial

Effective Feb. 1, the Army will revamp its system of military justice — thanks to a last-minute amendment which Congress tacked onto the Draft Act. But the medieval naval code, which metes out separate justice for the gold braid and the bellbottoms, still remains unchanged.

Actually, Navy justice hasn't altered basically since the rough-and-tumble days of John Paul Jones. Even among the gold braid, Annapolis-graduated officers get preferred treatment before naval courts.

For example, a junior officer who came up from the ranks was forced to take the rap recently at Washington's Naval Research Laboratory, while his commanding officers got off with a figurative slap-on-the-wrist.

Lt. (JG) Kenneth L. Curtis was charged and convicted of stealing a Navy generator. Despite his conviction, the amazing fact is that the generator was found bolted to the floor of the summer cottage of his senior officer, Commander Louis R. Hird, at Gray Eagle Lake, Minn. Curtis hadn't even signed the papers authorizing the shipment.

Commander Hird, an Annapolis man, got off with a light reprimand for "unauthorized use of Navy property." He had several charges against him, but all were dismissed, and after the trial, he shook hands all around and joked with the officers who had tried the case. Lt. Curtis, on the other hand, was convicted of stealing the generator.

Capt. Hilford Owen, the Research Laboratory's commanding officer, another Annapolis grad, also was accused of "borrowing" Navy equipment. But apparently wanting to get out of the Navy, he pleaded "insanity." A Navy doctor, Comdr. John Edward Nardini of Bethesda Naval Hospital, testified that Captain Owen was "flustered" and suffered from "mild depression." His "continuity of ideas" also wasn't what it should be. His examination of Captain Owen had lasted only one hour and 30 minutes.

The naval court, however, turned Captain Owen's case back to the convening authority because it found "reasonable doubt" of the defendant's insanity. If normal procedure is followed, the Captain will get his discharge—but probably no punishment.

Note—Both Captain Owen and Commander Hird were able to buy new Buicks at dealer's price through Waldo Andrews, a Detroit promoter who was seeking contracts from the Naval Research Laboratory for manufacturing precision tools. Yet Lt. Curtis, who didn't get a Buick, was the only one convicted by the naval court-martial. Curtis is not an Annapolis man.

GOP Young Blood

Two bigshot gamblers, Dan Sullivan and Lincoln Fitzgerald, were led into a courtroom at Mount Clemens, Mich., last week to stand trial. They had fled from Michigan nearly four years before, and their return marked a triumph for go-getting young Republican Ed Jacob, prosecutor of Macomb County.

It also highlighted a row inside Michigan Republican circles which flared briefly at the Philadelphia Convention and which probably will be followed up by the Dewey Administration—if there is one.

At Philadelphia, the strong Vandenberg contingent of the Michigan delegation put the skids under pro-Dewey Mrs. Dudley Hay as secretary of the Republican National Committee. Only Michigander who stood up for Mrs. Hay was young Ed Jacob. For Mrs. Hay had helped him in his crime cleanup of Macomb County, which stands cheek-and-jowl alongside Detroit and gets a backwash of Detroit racketeers and gamblers.

From Macomb County, gamblers Danny Sullivan and Lincoln Fitzgerald fled to Reno, Nevada, in 1945. There Ed Jacob pursued them, and with the help of Nevada's Gov. Vail Pittman and Attorney General Allen Bible last week finally brought them back to Michigan.

Powerful GOP forces in Michigan, allegedly backed by Frank McKay, the GOP racetrack bigshot, are now out to defeat Jacob. Whether he wins or not, however, the Dewey boys are watching Jacob. They haven't forgotten his help at Philadelphia, and are looking round for young GOP blood anyway.

Dress Rehearsal For War

Eight miles out of Frankfort, Germany, at the Rhine-Main airport, is a place the GI's call "Boom Town." It is called that because a new town has sprung up overnight, with the carpenters' hammers still making as much noise as the airplane motors—all because of the Berlin airlift.

One thing about this airlift which most people don't realize is that it's an Air Force rehearsal for future possible eventualities. And the top air people are quite candid about this fact.

Furthermore, if the diplomats succeed in raising the Berlin blockade, the Air Force does not intend to abandon its installations. Boom Town will stay right on—just in case the Russians tighten up their economic grip on Berlin once again.

Revelation Of Full Story On Spies Sure If Republicans Win

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 — Some day—perhaps as early as six months hence—the whole story will become known of what evidence was presented to the Federal grand jury about disloyalty among employees of the government and why no indictments were made. Until then, information from authoritative sources can be pieced together somewhat as follows:

1. The recent presentation of evidence was made contrary to the wishes of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which did not believe the case was sufficiently constructed to assure convictions and urged that more time be permitted for "undercover" investigation of certain witnesses.

2. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was not advised of what evidence was presented to the jury, which is contrary to practice in cases of such magnitude and nation-wide importance, especially since the work of inquiry by the FBI was to continue.

3. Assistant Attorney General Clark, is believed to have wanted to request indictments but is said to have been overruled on the ground that convictions could not be obtained.

4. Although nobody outside the jury room is entitled to know what the individual grand jurors did or said, rumors have been current here that the grand jury wanted to indict and would have done so had there been any encouragement from the Department of Justice.

Statement Should Have Been Made

5. Senator Ferguson of Michigan, chairman of the Senate committee investigating looseness in checking up on disloyal persons in the government service, has publicly declared that the grand jury should have issued a public "presentment" describing the testimony and stating why no indictments were returned. This would have disclosed the weaknesses in the law or in the chain of evidence as a basis for legislation.

6. The claim of president Truman that the evidence was "insufficient" to bring indictments is now believed to be based chiefly on the inability of the prosecution to show that the information transmitted to spies actually went to the Russian government or, if it did, that the federal employees involved knowingly and willfully transmitted the information for that purpose. It is almost impossible to prove "intent" under present laws. This reveals a weakness which it is the duty of congressional committees to investigate and report on to Congress so stronger legislation can be passed enabling the government to purge its rolls of the disloyal.

7. Refusal of the executive agencies of the government to cooperate with congressional committees has resulted in hearings in which some innocent persons have been injured, but it also is true that, by reason of the technicalities raised in connection with the grand jury investigation by the Executive branch of the government itself, some persons have escaped punishment.

8. Refusal of certain witnesses to answer a simple question as to whether they were members of the Communist Party or whether they ever met the self-confessed spy, Miss Bentley, has raised doubts in the minds of members of congressional committees concerning the total innocence of some of those witnesses who now claim immunity from answering on constitutional grounds.

9. Examination of such evidence as has been made public by Miss Bentley—who testified under oath that her story has been checked by the FBI and that the latter agency now has the $2,000 she received from the Russian government in reward for her spy work—does not reveal all that is known to the FBI about the transmission of information in unauthorized ways by government employees.

Normandy Invasion Leak

10. The fact that the Russian government knew in advance through top-level channels that the Normandy invasion would be launched in June 1944 does not excuse the laxity of employees in transmitting that information to persons whose relationships with other governments they now claim were not known to them. The Nazis used Russians as a "front" for their espionage work during the war, and the mere fact that an official was talking to a Russian did not mean he was talking to an "ally."

11. The failure of the Truman Administration in the year 1948 properly to check on the appointment to a high post of a man who had been under scrutiny of the FBI and had resigned from the Navy under circumstances that indicated it was not entirely voluntary on his part brings the problem up to date and poses the question as to why such an individual was this year put in charge of issuing licenses for the export of goods to Russia while the "cold war" with the Soviets was going on.

Two congressional committees will pursue the inquiries this Autumn despite Mr. Truman's effort to squelch them by crying out "politics" and "red herring." One thing the American people may be sure of is that there will be a revelation of the complete story some time after next January if the Republican administration is elected and all the available files. Reasons for the strange handling of the whole case will then become known.

U. S. Relations With Russia Traceable To Roosevelt Regime

By MARK SULLIVAN

Just where did we go wrong in our relations with Russia? So far as the answer is in actions of government, it is in documentary records, chiefly of course those of the Roosevelt Administration. Some of these are beginning to emerge, but some still have, properly, the status of secret official documents. And some of the personal relations between Roosevelt and Stalin, on the two occasions when they met—in the 1943 conference at Teheran and the 1945 one at Yalta—presumably were not put completely on record. In any relation between men, much that is important is expressed as much in manner and attitude as in words.

Yet history is as often determined by mass moods and attitudes of peoples as by actions of governments. Changes in popular attitudes are not formally recorded, and scholars tend to regard them as in the world of folklore or the like, rather than deserving the dignity of history. But actually such changes are the reality of history. They are basically determinative, governments follow them, in some cases create them. For the understanding of history they are often more illuminating than official documents, and much more vivid.

Popular Attitude Toward Russia

Our popular attitude toward Russia after the recent war began but before we were in it, during 1940 and early '41, was illustrated by two incidents. At that time we thought of the issue confronting the world as between free government and dictatorship—all dictatorships, including the Russian one. In a bit of rhyme here recalled from memory that Mr. Earl Godwin spoke over the radio, he, with colloquial abbreviation, lumped all four of the dictators as:

"Hit, and Muss, and Gory Joe;
and the iittle man in Tokyo."

The same grouping was in a placard set up in some of our early training camps, which I recall from hearsay at the time. To warn the young recruits to be guarded about talking, they were told that four pairs of ears were listening: the four pictured on the placard, were those of Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin and Tojo.

That was in 1940. Presently one dictator, Hitler, attacked another, Stalin. At once, though we were not yet in the war, we went to Stalin's aid, with lend-lease material and otherwise. And with that began a change in our popular attitude toward Russia, some of it arising spontaneuously, some promoted by our government, practically all carried by the press and radio. Now we were told, and tended to feel, that Russia, because it was resisting Hitler, was on our side of the world issue. In the changed attitude, "Gory Joe" became "Uncle Joe" and "Good Old Joe." So strong and general became this attitude, especially after we entered the war and were a formal ally of Russia, that anyone who spoke ill of Russia risked denunciation. This continued after the war ended. Throughout the 1945 negotiations toward a United Nations, the practically universal American feeling, expressed with strong earnestness by our leaders of government and almost literally all our spokesmen of public though, was that we must continue to regard Russia as our ally and friend.

Roosevelts Concurrence Blamed

Along with the attitude of our people, and having to it much relation of cause and effect, want the policy of our government and actions by it. Decisions we made, especially toward the end of the war, were an esential factor in what our relation to Russia has now come to be. The conferences of Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill, at Teheran and Yalta, made military decisions about bringing the war to a conclusion, and diplomatic decisions looking to the future. So far as the proceedings at these conferences have become known, it seems apparent that Roosevelt concurred with Stalin in decisions which enlarged the post-war strength and position of Russia, thereby giving her the leverage which she now uses against us. Admittedly it would have been difficult to follow simultaneously a short-term course of bringing the war to an early and successful conclusion, and a long-term course of restraining Russia's postwar position and power. The paramount consideration which might have kept both our government and our people nearer to the right course had they borne it steadily in mind, was that Russia has a single unilateral and permanent purpose, the communizing of the world.

Further, Soviet Russia demands a voice in the settlement of Middle Eastern and African questions although Soviet Russia did no fighting for the liberation of these areas.

The Democrats are embarrassed by the fact that at Teheran, Yalta, Potsdam and the Paris Council of Foreign Ministers, Roosevelt and Truman gave Russia a blank check. It is almost impossible for George Marshall to go back on Roosevelt and Truman and that is why his negotiations with the Russians produce so many difficulties.

The Republicans are equally embarrassed because since the operation of the Bipartisan Foreign Policy, Senator Vandenberg has tended to accept the State Department's view. Furthermore, they cannot discountenance the official attitude of the United States without giving the impression of supporting Soviet Russia, and they can only get such information as the State Department gives them.

So we now have before us the problem of the Italian colonies. They were liberated by British and American troops. The Russians played no part in that campaign. Furthermore, the Russians objected to everything that was being done in Africa because they felt that that would interfere with the Second Front. It will be remembered that Roosevelt had promised Stalin a Second Front in 1942 when Soviet Russia was being defeated, but D-Day did not eventuate until 1944.

Roosevelt promised more than he could deliver at the time and the Russians claimed their pound of flesh, although we have given them more than they had any right to expect.

Nevertheless, all the events and all the evidence since 1942, now available, prove conclusively that Churchill was right in his plans for the liberation of Africa and Italy and the underbelly of Europe through the Balkans.

Had Roosevelt listened to Churchill, we should not today be faced by so aggressive and demanding a Russia which acts as though the United States and Great Britain were secondary allies.

That is the Russian side of the case and whenever our delegates meet theirs, they are faced by Roosevelt promises and arrangments, and Roosevelt is dead and cannot do anything about it. As long as the Democrats are in the White House and the State Department, they are stuck with the Roosevelt formula, which they can-

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Italian Colonies

THE UNITED STATES, Great Britain and France did not interfere with Soviet Russia's exclusive authority to seize Karelia in Finland or Besarabia in Rumania or to establish an Iron Curtain between the Western World and all the Balkan States except Greece. Yet Soviet Russia has demanded a voice in the affairs of Japan, Korea, Manchuria, although Russia was in the Far Eastern War six days and did no fighting.

This is as difficult for the Russians as for us, because the Russians have discovered that there is a will here to change but an incapacity to find the direction. This produces diplomatic static which confuses the Russians as it does the Americans.

The aforesaid applies to the problem of the Italian Colonies with which the Four Powers now have to deal. Unless they reach an agreement, concerning them by September 21, this question will go to the Assembly of the United Nations where they will become subject to barter and deals. The Arab states, for instance, will use their votes in the Assembly to bargain over Palestine; the South Americans and the Chinese will use this problem as bargaining points between the United States, Great Britain and Soviet Russia.

It will no longer be, in the Assembly of the United Nations, a question of the disposition of the Italian Colonies, the reconstruction of Italy, the safety of the Mediterranean and the Suez Canal. It will be a competition among small powers to use their votes to get as much as they can out of great powers.

The colonies involved are Eritrea in Africa on the Red Sea; Italian Somaliland on the Indian Ocean; Libya, which includes Tripolitania and Cyrenaica in North Africa from Egypt to Tunis; and some islands in the Aegean. The Libyan and Aegean areas have been Italian on and off for many cnturies, often controlling the historic fate of Italy. Certainly Russia has never, remotely or recently, played any part in their history.

Don't rub it in.

That's my advice. . .$5, please!

I might add that at the moment I am being sued by the corner drugstore and the doctors in my neighborhood because I am now an authority on poison oak.

They hate me because I speak from experience. In fact, right now I'm typing with one hand so I can use the other to apply the contents of bottle Number 1 to shoulder Number 2.

My bathroom has so many bottles it looks like a drugstore. In fact, I just had the "his" and "hers" on the towels translated into Latin.

I still don't know where I could have picked up this rustic rash. I haven't talked to Woody Herman in weeks.

On second thought, I might have caught it last Thursday. I thought there was something suspicious about that bouquet the studio sent me.

Being an expert, I want to say that people have the wrong idea about poison oak. The scratching doesn't bother you. . .it's the itching.

In closing, I want to offer one word of consolation to any other victims of the "woodland scratch" . . .they say poison ivy is worse.

Truman Continues Cocky In His Wrong-Headedness

If he were not so cocky in his wrong-headedness, Mr. Truman would deserve public sympathy for the quality of political advice he has been getting.

Whoever put him up to the notion of calling the inquiry into pro-Russian activities a "red herring" did the President no service, political or otherwise. Leaving aside the still incomplete hearings on espionage, what the Administration must explain is why men who were known to be under investigation for disloyalty were given high positions in Government and moved about from one post to another.

The low point of Truman ineptitude was his reiteration a few days ago that the congressional study was a red herring "with the strongest kind of smell," at the very time that the unfortunate Mrs. Kosenkina was leaping from the third-floor window of the Soviet Consulate in New York, where she now says she had been kept prisoner, because she was terrified of being returned to Russia. The American people have seen no more dramatic evidence of Soviet tyranny than the desperate effort of this woman to escape its clutches even at the risk of death.

Of course, Congress was not responsible for the desire of the two Russian school teachers to seek refuge and freedom in the United States. But the Thomas committee had just announced that it wanted to question both about Soviet spying in this country. The whole inquiry has been hampered at every step by President Truman.

Even as the President was smearing the House Committee on un-American Affairs, Molotov was accusing American officials of "kidnaping" the two Russians school teachers, and a Pravda commentator was charging the FBI with conspiracy with the "White Guard" against Soviet citizens in America. Perhaps Mr. Truman can find satisfaction in Henry Wallace's enthusiastic indorsement of his attack on the congressional inquiry at this time.

A foul odor is certainly rising from Washington, and its not from the headquarters of the un-American Activities Committee.

GOP V. P. Candidate Issues Weighty Statement

The nearest approach to a political statement that has come from the national candidates of either major party since their nomination was that given by Earl Warren Governor of California and Governor Dewey's running mate. It appeared in the Saturday Evening Post a day or so ago, and called for "decentralization of authority, because the strength of the republic depends largely on the virility of the state and local governments."

While Gov. Warren pays his respects to "the top-heavy expensive government bureaus that are a public burden today," their greatest evil is "the fact that they get farther and farther away from the people."

Republicans generally will indorse this statement, and so will "Dixiecrats," who base their exodus on the contention that the 1948 Democratic platform proposed to make the nation master of matters which the Constitution explicitly reserved to the states. Federal trespass on the rights of the states, in its modern phases, began with the New Deal, reaching such heights that the array of Washington officeholders in almost every state outnumbered by as much as three to one their own employes.

One of the most vital features of the American Republic is its federated system. Unknown to the ancient world and substantially an American creation, it has solved the problem of territorial bigness which proved fatal to the great rambling empires of antiquity. Save for defense, foreign and interstate commerce, and the several safeguards of the Bill of Rights, American states were made masters of their own destinies, free to experiment—and if need be to revoke their experiments.

The system has worked well. Centralized bureaucratic domination from Washington—remote control, instead of from, and at, the "grass roots"—is not American.

Fantastic Profits Made On "Gift" Packages To Europe

Fantastic profits have been made on gift packages sold by private firms for shipment to Europe, a former American Military Government official charges. Earl Reinsel former chief of property control for AMG in Germany, said that last year Americans sent 22,000,000 such packages at a cost of a quarter of a billion dollars. That, he said, is double what they should have paid.

These charges do not affect charitable agencies like CARE, Mr Reinsel emphasized. While he thinks some details of their organization could be improved, he says CARE has "done a splendid job under adverse circumstances." And there are many private firms that are not profiteering on gift-package shipments.

But that is more than he is willing to say about the firms who have placed large advertisements in New York newspapers offering to send gift packages abroad. One such package, Mr. Reinsel says, sells for $10.95 and contains food and commodities that would retail at only $5.32. Even if the sender bought them over the counter and mailed them himself, the total cost including postage would be only $7.85. Since this includes a fair profit on each item, it seems to follow that the $10.95 prices includes a profit of 60 to 65 per cent on total costs plus overhead.

Under any circumstances, profits on this sale are unhealthy, and tend to undermine the normal workings of the free enterprise system. But when they are made through appeals to humanitarian feelings, they are outrageous.

Mr Reinsel should have his facts straight; he left Germany only six weeks ago. He said the Communists were making the most of the poor quality of much of the stuff ("coffee undrinkable and soap unusable") and telling the Germans that this is the normal working of capitalism.

For the average American, the best solution is to play safe and make such shipments through CARE or some other non-profit agency until the situation clears up.

Science finds that rats will starve in sight of food rather than use a new way of getting it. They must be communists.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Bleeding Requires Investigation

Bleeding from the rectum is usually indicative of trouble which may or may not be serious. Although cancer is a possibility there is no need to become overly disturbed because other conditions can also bring on the symptom. The only sure way to find out is to submit to examination.

Dr. Van Dellen

Hemorrhoids are the best possibility but, during the last decade, physicians have learned to investigate further. Many persons have piles and their mere presence does not necessarily mean that blood is arising from this source. All too often another lesion co-exists which is in reality the main site of trouble.

Before the medico is satisfied with the diagnosis "bleeding hemorrhoids," therefore, he is likely to suggest a more thorough checkup. A request such as this should never be denied because hospital records of individuals with cancer, polyps, and other types of tumors frequently reveal that bleeding has been blamed on piles. In one large clinic, a study revealed that one in four patients with rectal cancer told of being treated for something else before the actual disorder was detected. Th additional examination had not been carried out and when the sufferer failed to improve after the hemorrhoids had been treated, the real cause was found ultimately.

Although such occurences are not common, failing to do the job right often has serious implications. Even though hemorrhoids are the most frequent source of rectal bleeding, it always pays to make certain. In this way, the condition can be managed as it should.

Many instruments have been devised for examining this part of the body. They are not new but during the last several decades, improvements have been made so that they no longer resemdle the crude gadgets used in the past. With the proctoscope, for example, the rectum can be visualized. Tumors, cancer, polyps, ulcers, and infection can be recognized and guesswork is no longer required. When the exact bleeding point is seen, there can be no doubt as to the origin of the flow. Statistics show that one out of every 17 patients with rectal trouble have cancer. This is not a high percentage but serves to demonstrate why we are fortunate in having instruments of this type because the lesions can be discovered in their early stages.

Polyps also produce bleeding. These little miniature punching bags hanging from the walls are easily injured and, in this part of our anatomy, are more serious than those elsewhere because of their tendency to become malignant. They can be removed readily electrically unless located high in the intestine where they cannot be reached with the instrument. When extirpated they do not recur but new ones can develop. They do not always become cancerous but the possibility exists; therefore, no one should take chances. This is demonstrated vividly by a recent report on 200 patients with this condition; all but 4 followed the physician's advice and had them removed; the others refused and, during the next three years, the sufferers all returned to his office. It was discovered that the polyps had become cancerous.

BLEEDING FROM LUNGS

E. M. writes: What other condition besides tuberculosis could cause hemorrhage from the chest region?

Reply

Bronchiectasis, abscess, wounds, pneumonia, cancer, certain heart conditions, and blood clots should be investigated. Tuberculosis, however, is the most common cause.

DON'T WORRY

Mrs. C. writes: Will cutting hairs off the chin with a scissors cause cancer?

Reply

No, and I don't know why it should even be considered. After all, men have been shaving for a long time without the development of cancer from this cause.

KIDNEY STONE

M. E. H. writes: What is renal colic?

Reply

It is the distress produced when a kidney stone is attempting to pass. Pain is not only excruciating but if the "pebble" becomes imbedded and blocks the passageway, the urine cannot flow. This is a serious complication because such obstruction may damage the kidneys.

No, as phlebitis is not contagious; it usually originates from bacterial nests within the body.

OTHER CLEWS

Mrs. C. writes: Is it possible for a physician to tell whether a woman is pregnant merely by taking her blood pressure?

No, and neither will a urinalysis prove diagnostic. Both of these tests are made at frequent intervals during pregnancy, however, because they offer clews as to whether toxemia is developing.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16—Speaker Joe Martin and Senator Alben Barkley are on the opposite sides of the political fence, but, meeting by accident at a social function the other day, Speaker Martin went up to Barkley and said:

"Senator, I am sorry I have not had the opportunity to congratulate you on the high honor that your party has seen fit to bestow upon you."

"Well, you know it reminds me of the story of the man who had two sons," replied Senator Barkley. "One of them became a sailor and went to sea, the other became Vice President and he hasn't heard from either one of them since."

Navy's Obsolete Court-Martial

Effective Feb. 1, the Army will revamp its system of military justice — thanks to a last-minute amendment which Congress tacked onto the Draft Act. But the medieval naval code, which metes out separate justice for the gold braid and the bellbottoms, still remains unchanged.

Actually, Navy justice hasn't altered basically since the rough-and-tumble days of John Paul Jones. Even among the gold braid, Annapolis-graduated officers get preferred treatment before naval courts.

For example, a junior officer who came up from the ranks was forced to take the rap recently at Washington's Naval Research Laboratory, while his commanding officers got off with a figurative slap-on-the-wrist.

Lt. (JG) Kenneth L. Curtis was charged and convicted of stealing a Navy generator. Despite his conviction, the amazing fact is that the generator was found bolted to the floor of the summer cottage of his senior officer, Commander Louis R. Hird, at Gray Eagle Lake, Minn. Curtis hadn't even signed the papers authorizing the shipment.

Commander Hird, an Annapolis man, got off with a light reprimand for "unauthorized use of Navy property." He had several charges against him, but all were dismissed, and after the trial, he shook hands all around and joked with the officers who had tried the case. Lt. Curtis, on the other hand, was convicted of stealing the generator.

Capt. Hilford Owen, the Research Laboratory's commanding officer, another Annapolis grad, also was accused of "borrowing" Navy equipment. But apparently wanting to get out of the Navy, he pleaded "insanity." A Navy doctor, Comdr. John Edward Nardini of Bethesda Naval Hospital, testified that Captain Owen was "flustered" and suffered from "mild depression." His "continuity of ideas" also wasn't what it should be. His examination of Captain Owen had lasted only one hour and 30 minutes.

The naval court, however, turned Captain Owen's case back to the convening authority because it found "reasonable doubt" of the defendant's insanity. If normal procedure is followed, the Captain will get his discharge—but probably no punishment.

Note—Both Captain Owen and Commander Hird were able to buy new Buicks at dealer's price through Waldo Andrews, a Detroit promoter who was seeking contracts from the Naval Research Laboratory for manufacturing precision tools. Yet Lt. Curtis, who didn't get a Buick, was the only one convicted by the naval court-martial. Curtis is not an Annapolis man.

GOP Young Blood

Two bigshot gamblers, Dan Sullivan and Lincoln Fitzgerald, were led into a courtroom at Mount Clemens, Mich., last week to stand trial. They had fled from Michigan nearly four years before, and their return marked a triumph for go-getting young Republican Ed Jacob, prosecutor of Macomb County.

It also highlighted a row inside Michigan Republican circles which flared briefly at the Philadelphia Convention and which probably will be followed up by the Dewey Administration—if there is one.

At Philadelphia, the strong Vandenberg contingent of the Michigan delegation put the skids under pro-Dewey Mrs. Dudley Hay as secretary of the Republican National Committee. Only Michigander who stood up for Mrs. Hay was young Ed Jacob. For Mrs. Hay had helped him in his crime cleanup of Macomb County, which stands cheek-and-jowl alongside Detroit and gets a backwash of Detroit racketeers and gamblers.

From Macomb County, gamblers Danny Sullivan and Lincoln Fitzgerald fled to Reno, Nevada, in 1945. There Ed Jacob pursued them, and with the help of Nevada's Gov. Vail Pittman and Attorney General Allen Bible last week finally brought them back to Michigan.

Powerful GOP forces in Michigan, allegedly backed by Frank McKay, the GOP racetrack bigshot, are now out to defeat Jacob. Whether he wins or not, however, the Dewey boys are watching Jacob. They haven't forgotten his help at Philadelphia, and are looking round for young GOP blood anyway.

Dress Rehearsal For War

Eight miles out of Frankfort, Germany, at the Rhine-Main airport, is a place the GI's call "Boom Town." It is called that because a new town has sprung up overnight, with the carpenters' hammers still making as much noise as the airplane motors—all because of the Berlin airlift.

One thing about this airlift which most people don't realize is that it's an Air Force rehearsal for future possible eventualities. And the top air people are quite candid about this fact.

Furthermore, if the diplomats succeed in raising the Berlin blockade, the Air Force does not intend to abandon its installations. Boom Town will stay right on—just in case the Russians tighten up their economic grip on Berlin once again.

Revelation Of Full Story On Spies Sure If Republicans Win

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 — Some day—perhaps as early as six months hence—the whole story will become known of what evidence was presented to the Federal grand jury about disloyalty among employees of the government and why no indictments were made. Until then, information from authoritative sources can be pieced together somewhat as follows:

1. The recent presentation of evidence was made contrary to the wishes of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which did not believe the case was sufficiently constructed to assure convictions and urged that more time be permitted for "undercover" investigation of certain witnesses.

2. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was not advised of what evidence was presented to the jury, which is contrary to practice in cases of such magnitude and nation-wide importance, especially since the work of inquiry by the FBI was to continue.

3. Assistant Attorney General Clark, is believed to have wanted to request indictments but is said to have been overruled on the ground that convictions could not be obtained.

4. Although nobody outside the jury room is entitled to know what the individual grand jurors did or said, rumors have been current here that the grand jury wanted to indict and would have done so had there been any encouragement from the Department of Justice.

Statement Should Have Been Made

5. Senator Ferguson of Michigan, chairman of the Senate committee investigating looseness in checking up on disloyal persons in the government service, has publicly declared that the grand jury should have issued a public "presentment" describing the testimony and stating why no indictments were returned. This would have disclosed the weaknesses in the law or in the chain of evidence as a basis for legislation.

6. The claim of president Truman that the evidence was "insufficient" to bring indictments is now believed to be based chiefly on the inability of the prosecution to show that the information transmitted to spies actually went to the Russian government or, if it did, that the federal employees involved knowingly and willfully transmitted the information for that purpose. It is almost impossible to prove "intent" under present laws. This reveals a weakness which it is the duty of congressional committees to investigate and report on to Congress so stronger legislation can be passed enabling the government to purge its rolls of the disloyal.

7. Refusal of the executive agencies of the government to cooperate with congressional committees has resulted in hearings in which some innocent persons have been injured, but it also is true that, by reason of the technicalities raised in connection with the grand jury investigation by the Executive branch of the government itself, some persons have escaped punishment.

8. Refusal of certain witnesses to answer a simple question as to whether they were members of the Communist Party or whether they ever met the self-confessed spy, Miss Bentley, has raised doubts in the minds of members of congressional committees concerning the total innocence of some of those witnesses who now claim immunity from answering on constitutional grounds.

9. Examination of such evidence as has been made public by Miss Bentley—who testified under oath that her story has been checked by the FBI and that the latter agency now has the $2,000 she received from the Russian government in reward for her spy work—does not reveal all that is known to the FBI about the transmission of information in unauthorized ways by government employees.

Normandy Invasion Leak

10. The fact that the Russian government knew in advance through top-level channels that the Normandy invasion would be launched in June 1944 does not excuse the laxity of employees in transmitting that information to persons whose relationships with other governments they now claim were not known to them. The Nazis used Russians as a "front" for their espionage work during the war, and the mere fact that an official was talking to a Russian did not mean he was talking to an "ally."

11. The failure of the Truman Administration in the year 1948 properly to check on the appointment to a high post of a man who had been under scrutiny of the FBI and had resigned from the Navy under circumstances that indicated it was not entirely voluntary on his part brings the problem up to date and poses the question as to why such an individual was this year put in charge of issuing licenses for the export of goods to Russia while the "cold war" with the Soviets was going on.

Two congressional committees will pursue the inquiries this Autumn despite Mr. Truman's effort to squelch them by crying out "politics" and "red herring." One thing the American people may be sure of is that there will be a revelation of the complete story some time after next January if the Republican administration is elected and all the available files. Reasons for the strange handling of the whole case will then become known.

U. S. Relations With Russia Traceable To Roosevelt Regime

By MARK SULLIVAN

Just where did we go wrong in our relations with Russia? So far as the answer is in actions of government, it is in documentary records, chiefly of course those of the Roosevelt Administration. Some of these are beginning to emerge, but some still have, properly, the status of secret official documents. And some of the personal relations between Roosevelt and Stalin, on the two occasions when they met—in the 1943 conference at Teheran and the 1945 one at Yalta—presumably were not put completely on record. In any relation between men, much that is important is expressed as much in manner and attitude as in words.

Yet history is as often determined by mass moods and attitudes of peoples as by actions of governments. Changes in popular attitudes are not formally recorded, and scholars tend to regard them as in the world of folklore or the like, rather than deserving the dignity of history. But actually such changes are the reality of history. They are basically determinative, governments follow them, in some cases create them. For the understanding of history they are often more illuminating than official documents, and much more vivid.

Popular Attitude Toward Russia

Our popular attitude toward Russia after the recent war began but before we were in it, during 1940 and early '41, was illustrated by two incidents. At that time we thought of the issue confronting the world as between free government and dictatorship—all dictatorships, including the Russian one. In a bit of rhyme here recalled from memory that Mr. Earl Godwin spoke over the radio, he, with colloquial abbreviation, lumped all four of the dictators as:

"Hit, and Muss, and Gory Joe;
and the iittle man in Tokyo."

The same grouping was in a placard set up in some of our early training camps, which I recall from hearsay at the time. To warn the young recruits to be guarded about talking, they were told that four pairs of ears were listening: the four pictured on the placard, were those of Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin and Tojo.

That was in 1940. Presently one dictator, Hitler, attacked another, Stalin. At once, though we were not yet in the war, we went to Stalin's aid, with lend-lease material and otherwise. And with that began a change in our popular attitude toward Russia, some of it arising spontaneuously, some promoted by our government, practically all carried by the press and radio. Now we were told, and tended to feel, that Russia, because it was resisting Hitler, was on our side of the world issue. In the changed attitude, "Gory Joe" became "Uncle Joe" and "Good Old Joe." So strong and general became this attitude, especially after we entered the war and were a formal ally of Russia, that anyone who spoke ill of Russia risked denunciation. This continued after the war ended. Throughout the 1945 negotiations toward a United Nations, the practically universal American feeling, expressed with strong earnestness by our leaders of government and almost literally all our spokesmen of public though, was that we must continue to regard Russia as our ally and friend.

Roosevelts Concurrence Blamed

Along with the attitude of our people, and having to it much relation of cause and effect, want the policy of our government and actions by it. Decisions we made, especially toward the end of the war, were an esential factor in what our relation to Russia has now come to be. The conferences of Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill, at Teheran and Yalta, made military decisions about bringing the war to a conclusion, and diplomatic decisions looking to the future. So far as the proceedings at these conferences have become known, it seems apparent that Roosevelt concurred with Stalin in decisions which enlarged the post-war strength and position of Russia, thereby giving her the leverage which she now uses against us. Admittedly it would have been difficult to follow simultaneously a short-term course of bringing the war to an early and successful conclusion, and a long-term course of restraining Russia's postwar position and power. The paramount consideration which might have kept both our government and our people nearer to the right course had they borne it steadily in mind, was that Russia has a single unilateral and permanent purpose, the communizing of the world.

These Days

The Italian Colonies

THE UNITED STATES, Great Britain and France did not interfere with Soviet Russia's exclusive authority to seize Karelia in Finland or Besarabia in Rumania or to establish an Iron Curtain between the Western World and all the Balkan States except Greece. Yet Soviet Russia has demanded a voice in the affairs of Japan, Korea, Manchuria, although Russia was in the Far Eastern War six days and did no fighting.

Further, Soviet Russia demands a voice in the settlement of Middle Eastern and African questions although Soviet Russia did no fighting for the liberation of these areas.

The Democrats are embarrassed by the fact that at Teheran, Yalta, Potsdam and the Paris Council of Foreign Ministers, Roosevelt and Truman gave Russia a blank check. It is almost impossible for George Marshall to go back on Roosevelt and Truman and that is why his negotiations with the Russians produce so many difficulties.

The Republicans are equally embarrassed because since the operation of the Bipartisan Foreign Policy, Senator Vandenberg has tended to accept the State Department's view. Furthermore, they cannot discountenance the official attitude of the United States without giving the impression of supporting Soviet Russia, and they can only get such information as the State Department gives them.

So we now have before us the problem of the Italian colonies. They were liberated by British and American troops. The Russians played no part in that campaign. Furthermore, the Russians objected to everything that was being done in Africa because they felt that that would interfere with the Second Front. It will be remembered that Roosevelt had promised Stalin a Second Front in 1942 when Soviet Russia was being defeated, but D-Day did not eventuate until 1944.

Roosevelt promised more than he could deliver at the time and the Russians claimed their pound of flesh, although we have given them more than they had any right to expect.

Nevertheless, all the events and all the evidence since 1942, now available, prove conclusively that Churchill was right in his plans for the liberation of Africa and Italy and the underbelly of Europe through the Balkans.

Had Roosevelt listened to Churchill, we should not today be faced by so aggressive and demanding a Russia which acts as though the United States and Great Britain were secondary allies.

That is the Russian side of the case and whenever our delegates meet theirs, they are faced by Roosevelt promises and arrangments, and Roosevelt is dead and cannot do anything about it. As long as the Democrats are in the White House and the State Department, they are stuck with the Roosevelt formula, which they cannot repudiate or even successfully revise without the appearance of repudiation.

This is as difficult for the Russians as for us, because the Russians have discovered that there is a will here to change but an incapacity to find the direction. This produces diplomatic static which confuses the Russians as it does the Americans.

The aforesaid applies to the problem of the Italian Colonies with which the Four Powers now have to deal. Unless they reach an agreement, concerning them by September 21, this question will go to the Assembly of the United Nations where they will become subject to barter and deals. The Arab states, for instance, will use their votes in the Assembly to bargain over Palestine; the South Americans and the Chinese will use this problem as bargaining points between the United States, Great Britain and Soviet Russia.

It will no longer be, in the Assembly of the United Nations, a question of the disposition of the Italian Colonies, the reconstruction of Italy, the safety of the Mediterranean and the Suez Canal. It will be a competition among small powers to use their votes to get as much as they can out of great powers.

The colonies involved are Eritrea in Africa on the Red Sea; Italian Somaliland on the Indian Ocean; Libya, which includes Tripolitania and Cyrenaica in North Africa from Egypt to Tunis; and some islands in the Aegean. The Libyan and Aegean areas have been Italian on and off for many cnturies, often controlling the historic fate of Italy. Certainly Russia has never, remotely or recently, played any part in their history.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

Don't rub it in.

That's my advice. . .$5, please!

I might add that at the moment I am being sued by the corner drugstore and the doctors in my neighborhood because I am now an authority on poison oak.

They hate me because I speak from experience. In fact, right now I'm typing with one hand so I can use the other to apply the contents of bottle Number 1 to shoulder Number 2.

My bathroom has so many bottles it looks like a drugstore. In fact, I just had the "his" and "hers" on the towels translated into Latin.

I still don't know where I could have picked up this rustic rash. I haven't talked to Woody Herman in weeks.

On second thought, I might have caught it last Thursday. I thought there was something suspicious about that bouquet the studio sent me.

Being an expert, I want to say that people have the wrong idea about poison oak. The scratching doesn't bother you. . .it's the itching.

Just Between Us

Don't Let An Outsider Break Up Romance; Ignore Her

By NANCY MOTTRAM

Nancy Mottram

(Q) "Dear Nancy: My main trouble is with another girl. She was going out occasionally with a fellow, when he asked me out. He dated her about twice after that, and then began going out steadily with me. Since then, she has been trying to break us up, and while she hasn't succeeded, we've been having a few quarrels lately. She phones him, always shows up at the places we go on dates, and makes it very obvious to us and everyone we know that she's still fond of him. I'm getting furious about this, and yet there isn't anything either of us can do to stop her as far as I know. Do you have any suggestions?"

(A) Her purpose is plain—if she can cause a real fight between you and the boy, he may come back to her. And, she'll succeed if you and the lad don't join forces, realize her ambition and begin to combat it. You don't have to avoid her or think that by talking back to her, you'll gain anything. You can keep up speaking acquaintance, but be completely indifferent to her act. Don't let an outsider's attitude be any cause for a breakup. Just show that no matter what she does, it makes no difference to you two, because you genuinely like each other. Get to the point where you can laugh about her actions, and once she takes the brunt of ridicule, she'll drop her campaign.

(Q) "Dear Nancy: Every Saturday afternoon, I have to go over to my older sister's house and baby-sit with her two children while she goes out. I'd rather be out swimming with the crowd or at a friend's house, but it's become a regular habit for my weekend afternoon and I can't get out of it. I wonder if you could suggest something for me to do so that I could have at least some Saturdays to myself without causing any arguments in the family.

(A) You might try to convince your sister to give you one or two Saturdays off a month and suggest some other baby-sitter who could fill in. It might be wise to continue going yourself quite regularly, for a while. Then, once she became used to the idea of having someone fill in while you had a free afternoon, it should be easier to get more and more time for yourself, especially when school starts and Saturdays and Sundays are your only holidays.

(Q) "Dear Nancy: A boy I've been going with for the past three months promised to call me several times about dates, and never did. He'd tell me he'd call to arrange the time he'd pick me up and I didn't hear from him the whole evening, though I stayed in and waited. Do you think I should call him or wait until he finally phones me?"

(A) Let him do the telephoning. If he doesn't call within half an hour afterwards, and you have something else to do, go ahead. You can't be expected to wait around for him indefinitely, and since he gave his word, it's up to him to keep it. Don't make the mistake of letting him know you're worried by calling him. He's the one who suggested calling, and it wouldn't be a good move on your part to phone if you don't hear from him.

Nancy will answer as many questions as possible in her column. Write her in care of this newspaper.

Advice To The Lovelorn

Engaged Man Goes Out With Another Girl Two Or Three Times A Week

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For six months I have been going out with a girl two or three nights a week. She knows I have a steady girl to whom I have been engaged for two years. My steady girl also knows I am going out with this girl, and she does not object as long as I go out with her on the nights I get through work early. I only go out with the other girl when I get through late, usually not until after 10 o'clock, when we go and have a few drinks.

This girl's family, however, object to the late hours and the drinks and have stopped her from going out with me. I think it is none of their business, as she is over 21 and knows I can't go out with her early. I wish I could straighten this out as I like the company of both girls.

"EAST BOSTON"

Dear "East Boston":

You are certainly a fine character for an engaged man. I can't understand why any girl would be satisfied to have her fiance go out drinking late at night with another girl two or three times a week, and any girl who would do that with an engaged man has no proper standards or conduct. I am in hearty agreement with her parents in this matter, and think they are doing exactly right to take a stand against her going out with you.

If you are so uncertain about your feeling for the girl to whom you are engaged that you want to go out with others at the same time, I think you should become unengaged immediately. In fact, I think your fiancee ought to be the one to put an end to your engagement herself. How would you like it if she went out with other men on the nights you are drinking with your girl friend?

Advice To The Lovelorn

Engaged Man Goes Out With Another Girl Two Or Three Times A Week

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For six months I have been going out with a girl two or three nights a week. She knows I have a steady girl to whom I have been engaged for two years. My steady girl also knows I am going out with this girl, and she does not object as long as I go out with her on the nights I get through work early. I only go out with the other girl when I get through late, usualnot until after 10 o'clock, when we go and have a few drinks.

This girl's family, however, object to the late hours and the drinks and have stopped her from going out with me. I think it is none of their business, as she is over 21 and knows I can't go out with her early. I wish I could straighten this out as I like the company of both girls.

"EAST BOSTON"

Dear "East Boston":

You are certainly a fine character for an engaged man. I can't understand why any girl would be satisfied to have her fiance go out drinking late at night with another girl two or three times a week, and any girl who would do that with an engaged man has no proper standards or conduct. I am in hearty agreement with her parents in this matter, and think they are doing exactly right to take a stand against her going out with you.

If you are so uncertain about your feeling for the girl to whom you are engaged that you want to go out with others at the same time, I think you should become unengaged immediately. In fact, I think your fiancee ought to be the one to put an end to your engagement herself. How would you like it if she went out with other men on the nights you are drinking with your girl friend?

27 Candidates Answer Call At Beall High

Eighty-five boys answered Coach William P. Hahn's first call for football candidates and participated in morning and afternoon drills yesterday at Fort Hill Field.

In the morning session from 9 to 11:30 and the afternoon practice from 2 to 4 basic fundamentals, running, passing, kicking, ball handling and position were stressed. The large squad donned gym shoes, shorts and T-shirts for the initial drills.

Two practice sessions will be held daily until school starts, Coach Hahn announced.

Fort Hill will launch its 1948 campaign on September 10 with Washington and Lee High School of Arlington, Va., here. The Sentinels lone setback in ten games last year was suffered in the season's opener at the hands of Wash-Lee.

Three Assist Hahn

Assisting Hahn on opening day were three college gridders—Fred Davis, of Maryland; Ralph Beard of V.P.I. and Larry Hansrote, who will enter V.P.I. this fall.

First stringers holding over from the 1947 team present were Glen Burke, end; Fred Corbin, tackle and Charles Lattimer, center.

Other players on the 1947 squad participating in the drills included John Alderton, Robert Dicken, Jack Holliday, Marvin Luttrell, Eugene Mason, Larry McKenzie, Wonn Reynolds, Carlton Shore, Edgar Tucker, Gordon Andrews, Roger Craze, Patrick Murphy, Roy Manges, Gary Householder, James Judd, Ivan Abe, Herb Sarver, Ronnie Cage, Leonard Glenn, George Schoenadel, Charles Wageley, Donald Decker, Charles Robinette, Ralph Thuss, Michael Pratt and Kenneth Owens.

Eight of Fort Hill's regulars who were graduated in June were Stevenson and Jim Manges, halfbacks; Mil Dean, quarterback; Sensabaugh, fullback; Moler, end; Catlett, tackle, and J. Lewis and Bennett, guards.

27 Report At Beall

At Frostburg only 27 candidates for Beall High School's football team answered the first call issued by Coach Joseph Hoopengardner. The Beall mentor expects more boys to report this week when the daily drills are continued. Training and blackboard talks comprised the first day's program. Equipment will be distributed next week.

Regulars from 1947 present included Darrell Stevens, Leo Brady, Jack Robeson and Sam Walker. Other members of last season's squad reporting on the first day were Larry Grimm, Ed Yetter, Eddie Moran, Robert Gray, Berl Plummer, Glenn Workman, Ralph Garritano, Clarence Rice, Joe Hunt and Joe Ruffo.

Lesnevich Will Fight Walcott

Meet On Same Card With Cerdan, Zale

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (INS)—The Tournament of Champions, Inc., announced today it will promote a heavyweight boxing bout between Jersey Joe Walcott and Gus Lesnevich at Roosevelt Stadium, Jersey City, on Sept. 21.

This clash between the two leading contenders for the vacated crown Joe Louis will be a co-feature with the Tony Zale-Marcel Cerdan middleweight title fight.

The T. of C. thus stole the two leading figures in the heavyweight title tourney planned by its promotional rival, the 20th Century Sporting Club, which has controlled the heavyweight situation since the reign of James J. Braddock.

The Walcott-Lesnevich and Zale-Cerdan double attraction also will take the edge off the 20th Century's lightweight title fight between Champion Ike Williams and Jesse Flores, carded for Yankee Stadium on Sept. 22, just one day later.

Because of the "double-header," T. of C. Promoter Andy Niederreiter announced that ringside seat prices would be scaled from $30 to $40. Lesnevich and Walcott will split 50-50 on a $100,000 guarantee, while Zale has been guaranteed $120,000 and his challenger $50,000.

In the event of rain on Sept. 21, the T. of C. show will be postponed to Sept. 22, the same date as the Williams-Flores fight across the Hudson river.

Corriganville Meets Hyndman, Park Battles Allegany Grove Today

Teams involved in the battle for fourth place meet in the top game of the County Softball League today when Corriganville plays host to the Hyndman Firemen.

Hyndman holds the 4th spot at the present time with a 27-17 record while Corriganville (26-19) holds 5th place just 1½ games back.

Potomac Valley, holder of 2nd place with a 29-15 record plays host to Narrows Park Cardinals (28-17) and a win for the latter would reduce the Cubs' edge to one-half game.

Wellersburg in first place with 31-12 will meet Allegany Grove (19-26) at Wellersburg and Bedford Road (18-27) invades Ellerslie (17-27).

The Phone Workers will win by forfeit over the Corner Merchants who gave up their franchise.

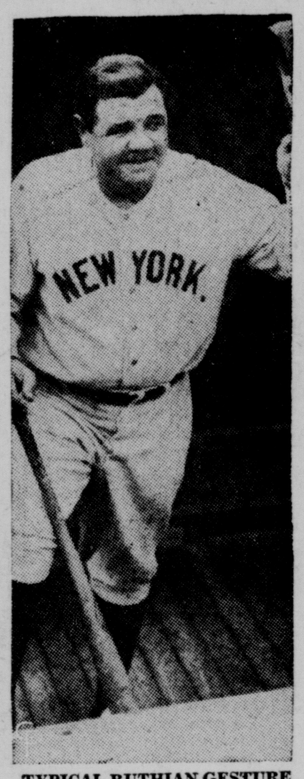

BABE RUTH — His Career Baseball's Greatest Saga

BABE RUTH broke into big league baseball with Boston Red Sox in 1914 as a pitcher and a good one.

THE DAYS OF GLORY for the home run king were long and many. The crack of Babe Ruth's magic bat still lingers in the ears of those lucky enough to hear it and see the soaring home runs that followed.

TYPICAL RUTHIAN GESTURE was this—cap off, bowing to the roaring thousands whose idol he was.

THE BAMBINO never forgot the kids — not even in the pain of his long illness. Though suffering, the Babe cheerfully autographed this ball for Danny Williams, an orphan, who called on Ruth to wish him well.

King Of Swat Played In Ten World Series

62 Marks Still Stand, Hit Over 700 Homers

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP)—In his 22 years in the major leagues, Babe Ruth amassed a total of 76 records, 62 of which still stand.

The Battering Bambino, who came to the New York Yankees from the Boston Red Sox in 1920, at one time held nearly every record in the art of blasting home runs.

In addition, he had many marks in runs batted in, long distance hitting other than homers, and one or two to attest to his value as a southpaw pitcher, which many present-day fans have forgotten.

Record books show that Ruth clubbed a total of 708 home runs in regular season games during his 21 years in the American League. He hit six more in two months of the 1935 season with the Boston Braves of the National League.

To this record figure of 714 homers may be added the 15 he blasted in ten world series, but which are not included in his lifetime total.

The last flash of his greatness was on May 25, 1935, at Pittsburgh when The Babe, then closing out his illustrious career with the Braves, cracked three four-baggers in successive times at bat.

As a pitcher with the Red Sox before he came to the Yankees as a batsman, Ruth pitched and won the longest game in a world series, defeating the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1916 in 14 innings. He held the record for the greatest number of consecutive scoreless innings in world series play, having had 13 in 1916 and six in 1918 for 29 innings.

Played In 10 Classies

Ruth participated in more world series than any other player—three with the Red Sox and seven with the Yankees. He batted more than .300 in the most series—six—and held the highest batting percentage for a single series, .625, made in 1928 against the St. Louis Cardinals. He scored the most runs in world series games, the most in a single series, and the most in a single series game.

The Babe also batted in the most runs, 33, and the most in a single series, 10. His 15 round trippers are tops in world series competition as are his three in a single game which he achieved twice, in 1926 and 1928. He was far in front in almost all of the departments in total bases and long hits.

When Ruth hung up the then astounding record of 29 home runs in 1919, it brought about his purchase by Col. Jacob Ruppert and Col. Til Huston, then the owners of the Yankees. Ruth reported to Manager Miller Huggins at the Yankees' training camp at Jacksonville, Fla., in 1920.

That season he astonished the baseball world by driving 54 homers, and the next year beat that mark with 59 to help the Yankees to their first pennant. They won again in 1922 and '23 and the latter year captured their first world championship. Although he set no home run records in those years, he had a batting average of .393 in 1923, the best he ever made. That led the league.

Hit 60 Homers In 1927

It was not until 1927 that he set the major league record for homers which still stands, 60. He followed with 54 in 1928, and after that gradually slowed down. In 11 of the years he was with the Yankees, he made 40 or more homers.

On 70 occasions in his career he made two homers in a single game and on four times he slammed three in a game, twice in world series competition. On 16 occasions, he walloped home runs with the bases full, being topped only by Lou Gehrig in that department.

Joe's Crusaders provided the biggest upset of the City Softball League's second half championship race yesterday when they snapped the Amvets' 10-game winning streak by winning over the league leaders to the tune of 8-5 at Community Park.

An eight-run rally in the second inning decided the game. If fact, all of the Crusaders' hits were made in that frame as Allen Sheetz, relief pitcher, twirled no-run, no-hit ball in the last four frames.

During the "big inning" Jimmie Brown and Carter Banks collected two hits each. The Crusaders drove Bill Whiteman to cover before Sheetz came in to whiff Yates but Brown's second single drove in two more runs before the fire was put out.

Lacy's-Amvets Play Today

Banks went the route for the Crusaders, yielding five hits. "Nebs" George homered off Bill Mann with two aboard in the 2nd and Lou Riehl and Lee rapped two-baggers for the Amvets. Mann was the winning pitcher.

The Amvets are scheduled to play Lacy's Delicatets today on the Rolling Mill diamond. A victory would place Lacy's one-half game out of first place.

Reed's Electricians tightened their grip on third place by walloping North End, 16-7. Gene Basilio was the "big gun" in this game with two triples, a double and two singles. Gene Scaletta rapped a two-bagger and two singles while "Chug" Aman obtained two of North End's six hits.

Underdonk Wins 20th

Lacy's Delicatets brushed aside Ballard's Cleaners, 10-4, and Bill Underdonk notched his 20th win of the season as Astor Cab took the measure of Astor Restaurant, 8-5. "Lippy" Humbertson, formerly of the Corner Merchants, belted a homer with two aboard and also smacked a single for the Cabbies. Johnny Cox rapped two singles and Harry Dean hammered a triple for the winners while Cramblitt got two of the losers' seven blows. The scores:

The Moose racked up 20 hits. Claude Robinson with a homer and two singles and Ed Shrader, Jim Angellatta and Bob Wade with three singles apiece sparked the winners' attack. "Penny" Shaffer hit a homer and single, Loibel two singles and Ronald Palmer hit for the circuit for the K. of C. Score:

The Sportlight by GRANTLAND RICE

Game Called

Game called by darkness — let the curtain fall,
No more remembered thunder sweeps the field.
No more the ancient echoes hear the call
To one who wore so well both sword and shield.
The Big Guy's left us with the night to face,
And there is no one who can take his place.

Game called — and silence settles on the plain.
Where is the crash of ash against the sphere?
Where is the mighty music, the refrain
That once brought joy to every waiting ear?
The Big Guy's left us, lonely in the dark,
Forever waiting for the flaming spark.

Game called—what more is there for one to say?
How dull and drab the field looks to the eye.
For one who ruled it in a golden day
Has waved his cap to bid us all good-bye.
The Big Guy's gone—by land or sky or foam
May the Great Umpire call him "safe at home."

The greatest figure the world of sport has ever known has passed from the field. Game called on account of darkness. Babe Ruth is dead.

There have been mighty champions in their day and time from John L. Sullivan to Jack Dempsey—such stars as Bobby Jones, Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson, on and on, who walked along the pathway of fame.

But there has been only one Babe Ruth—one Bambino, who caught and held the love and admiration of countless millions around the world.

From the time he appeared on the big league scene with the Boston Red Sox in 1914, to the day his playing career ended more than 20 years later, Ruth was the greatest all-around ballplayer in the history of the game. He was a brilliant left-handed pitcher—the top power hitter of all time—a star defensive outfielder who could be rated with the best.

He was the one ballplayer who was a master of offense and defense—the nonpareil in both.

But Ruth was something more than a great ballplayer. He was an emblem, a symbol. No other athlete ever approached his color, not even the colorful Jack Dempsey, who had more than his share.

Babe Ruth's appeal to the kids of this nation was something beyond belief. He loved them and the kids knew it. There was nothing phoney about his act. The kids knew the Babe was the greatest home run hitter of all time—that he was one of the greatest pitchers of all time—that he was an able pinch-hitter—that he could do more with a bat and a baseball than any player that ever lived. And the Babe could. But they also knew he was their pal.

I was present when he drove 60 miles one night before a world series game in Chicago to see a sick boy. "And if you write anything about it," he said, "I'll knock your brains out." He meant it that way.

Oddly enough, the Babe and Walter Johnson, the two stars on offense and defense, the mighty hitter and the whirlwind pitcher, died from the same cause—a tumor attached to the brain.

And once again, oddly enough, it was Babe Ruth who was Johnson's nemesis in the box and at the bat. He told me once that he had beaten Johnson six times by the scores of 1 to 0. And even the great Johnson was none too keen about facing him from the firing hill.

The True Babe

I've been a close friend of Babe Ruth since 1919, nearly 30 years ago when the Red Sox and Giants traveled north from spring training together.

The true story of Babe's life will never be written — the story of wrecked cars he left along the highway—the story of the night he came near dropping Miller Huggins off a train—the story of the $100,000 or more he lost in Cuba one racing winter. (The Babe told me it was $200,000.)

The story of the ribald, carefree Babe who ignored all traffic angles. I was riding home with Ruth one night after a game of golf. The Babe was late. He ignored red lights and everything else in a big car. I begged Babe to let me get out and take a taxi. The Babe only laughed.

"These cops are my pals," he said. "A funny thing happened yesterday. Maybe I'd had a shot or so too much. Anyway, my car stalled. A big cop came up and asked what the matter was.

"'It won't run,' I said.

"'You're drunk,' the cop said.

"'I hit him in the nose.

"'Now I know you're drunk, you so-and-so,' the cop said.

"He shoved me out of the way and drove me home."

One day the Babe was going the wrong way on a road to some golf club.

"Hey, this is a one-way street," some traffic cop hollered.

"I'm only driving one way, you dumb—," the Babe said.

The cop, enraged, came rushing up, "Oh, hello Babe," he said. "I didn't know it was you. Drive anyway you want to."

I sat one day with Babe at St. Albans, his golf club. The Babe took out a .22 rifle, and he and a pal began shooting away the door knob at a $1 a shot. The Babe missed some guy who had just opened the door by two inches. "He should have knocked," the Babe said.

Just one day with the Babe was a big adventure. There was the time he planted a small explosive bomb in some pal's car and almost blew up the place, including the Babe and myself. "I didn't know it was that strong," was all he said.

He was a rough, rowdy, swaggering figure, more profane than anyone I ever hope to meet again, with a strong sense of decency and justice and fair play. He was a sportsman, if I ever saw one. He wanted no advantage at any start.

There was the day Miller Huggins was going to fine Ruth $5,000. He had been absent two days. The fine was to be plastered after the game. All baseball writers were notified. The Babe appeared before the game, red-eyed and dazed looking. He was in terrible shape. He hit two home runs and a triple. Huggins forgot the fines.

Great Guy To Be With

These are among the true stories of Babe Ruth, who had no regard for the conventions of the common or normal man, whether this included action or words. But, beyond all this, he was open-hearted, friendly, always cheerful, a great guy to be with.

I can still hear the roar of voices wherever he was. There was nothing quiet and sedate about the Babe.

He could recall few names. "I caught back of him for 10 years," Mickey Cochrane once told me. "But he never knew my name. It was "Hello, kid."

Driving around, Babe always responded to those who called out, "Hey, Babe." His reply was "Hello, Mom," or "Hello, Pop."

"They can't forget my funny-looking pan," he said once. They won't forget his funny-looking pan soon. His records were terrific, but they meant little when compared to the man who was so far above all the records he ever set. I'v never seen him turn a mean trick.

No game will ever see his like, his equal again. He was one in many, many lifetimes. One all alone.

Jinx Trails "Red"

CHICAGO, Aug. 16 (AP)—It's just one thing after another for Al "Red" Schoendienst of the Cardinals. Already out of the lineup because of an injured shoulder, Schoendienst was sitting on the bench minding his own business when—wham—he was hit on the jaw by the infield warmup ball. He was knocked cold for a couple minutes.

Players, Fans Stand In Reverent Silence Upon Ruth's Death

Baseball fans stood in reverent silence last night as the death of Babe Ruth was announced in major league parks at Boston, New York and Pittsburgh.

Brooklyn and Boston players stood bareheaded in front of their dugouts at Braves Field and the four umpires, also with heads bowed, faced center field.

The announcement was made in Pittsburgh just before the start of the Pirates-Cincinnati game. The crowd and players rose at once in silent prayer.

At the Polo Grounds in New York, where The Babe played in his first years as a Yankee, the same ceremonies were observed. The Yankees and Giants were playing an exhibition game.

No other major league games were played last night.

Babe Ruth Set 72 Major League Records

85 Boys Report For Fort Hill Grid Practice

27 Candidates Answer Call At Beall High

Eighty-five boys answered Coach William P. Hahn's first call for football candidates and participated in morning and afternoon drills yesterday at Fort Hill Field.

In the morning session from 9 to 11:30 and the afternoon practice from 2 to 4 basic fundamentals, running, passing, kicking, ball handling and position were stressed. The large squad donned gym shoes, shorts and T-shirts for the initial drills.

Two practice sessions will be held daily until school starts, Coach Hahn announced.

Fort Hill will launch its 1948 campaign on September 10 with Washington and Lee High School of Arlington, Va., here. The Sentinels lone setback in ten games last year was suffered in the season's opener at the hands of Wash-Lee.

Three Assist Hahn

Assisting Hahn on opening day were three college gridders—Fred Davis, of Maryland; Ralph Beard of V.P.I. and Larry Hansrote, who will enter V.P.I. this fall.

First stringers holding over from the 1947 team present were Glen Burke, end; Fred Corbin, tackle and Charles Lattimer, center.

Other players on the 1947 squad participating in the drills included John Alderton, Robert Dicken, Jack Holliday, Marvin Luttrell, Eugene Mason, Larry McKenzie, Wonn Reynolds, Carlton Shore, Edgar Tucker, Gordon Andrews, Roger Craze, Patrick Murphy, Roy Manges, Gary Householder, James Judd, Ivan Abe, Herb Sarver, Ronnie Cage, Leonard Glenn, George Schoenadel, Charles Wageley, Donald Decker, Charles Robinette, Ralph Thuss, Michael Pratt and Kenneth Owens.

Eight of Fort Hill's regulars who were graduated in June were Stevenson and Jim Manges, halfbacks; Mil Dean, quarterback; Sensabaugh, fullback; Moler, end; Catlett, tackle, and J. Lewis and Bennett, guards.

27 Report At Beall

At Frostburg only 27 candidates for Beall High School's football team answered the first call issued by Coach Joseph Hoopengardner. The Beall mentor expects more boys to report this week when the daily drills are continued. Training and blackboard talks comprised the first day's program. Equipment will be distributed next week.

Regulars from 1947 present included Darrell Stevens, Leo Brady, Jack Robeson and Sam Walker. Other members of last season's squad reporting on the first day were Larry Grimm, Ed Yetter, Eddie Moran, Robert Gray, Berl Plummer, Glenn Workman, Ralph Garritano, Clarence Rice, Joe Hunt and Joe Ruffo.

Lesnevich Will Fight Walcott

Meet On Same Card With Cerdan, Zale

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (INS)—The Tournament of Champions, Inc., announced today it will promote a heavyweight boxing bout between Jersey Joe Walcott and Gus Lesnevich at Roosevelt Stadium, Jersey City, on Sept. 21.

This clash between the two leading contenders for the vacated crown Joe Louis will be a co-feature with the Tony Zale-Marcel Cerdan middleweight title fight.

The T. of C. thus stole the two leading figures in the heavyweight title tourney planned by its promotional rival, the 20th Century Sporting Club, which has controlled the heavyweight situation since the reign of James J. Braddock.

The Walcott-Lesnevich and Zale-Cerdan double attraction also will take the edge off the 20th Century's lightweight title fight between Champion Ike Williams and Jesse Flores, carded for Yankee Stadium on Sept. 22, just one day later.

Because of the "double-header," T. of C. Promoter Andy Niederreiter announced that ringside seat prices would be scaled from $30 to $40. Lesnevich and Walcott will split 50-50 on a $100,000 guarantee, while Zale has been guaranteed $120,000 and his challenger $50,000.

In the event of rain on Sept. 21, the T. of C. show will be postponed to Sept. 22, the same date as the Williams-Flores fight across the Hudson river.

Corriganville Meets Hyndman, Park Battles Allegany Grove Today

Teams involved in the battle for fourth place meet in the top game of the County Softball League today when Corriganville plays host to the Hyndman Firemen.

Hyndman holds the 4th spot at the present time with a 27-17 record while Corriganville (26-19) holds 5th place just 1½ games back.

Potomac Valley, holder of 2nd place with a 29-15 record plays host to Narrows Park Cardinals (28-17) and a win for the latter would reduce the Cubs' edge to one-half game.

Wellersburg in first place with 31-12 will meet Allegany Grove (19-26) at Wellersburg and Bedford Road (18-27) invades Ellerslie (17-27).

The Phone Workers will win by forfeit over the Corner Merchants who gave up their franchise.

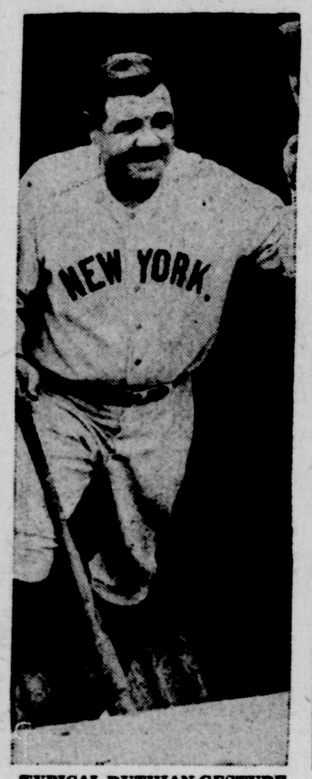

BABE RUTH — His Career Baseball's Greatest Saga

BABE RUTH broke into big league baseball with Boston Red Sox in 1914 as a pitcher and a good one.

THE DAYS OF GLORY for the home run king were long and many. The crack of Babe Ruth's magic bat still lingers in the ears of those lucky enough to hear it and see the soaring home runs that followed.

TYPICAL RUTHIAN GESTURE was this—cap off, bowing to the roaring thousands whose idol he was.

THE BAMBINO never forgot the kids — not even in the pain of his long illness. Though suffering, the Babe cheerfully autographed this ball for Danny Williams, an orphan, who called on Ruth to wish him well.

Joe's Crusaders provided the biggest upset of the City Softball League's second half championship race yesterday when they snapped the Amvets' 10-game winning streak by winning over the league leaders to the tune of 8-5 at Community Park.

An eight-run rally in the second inning decided the game. If fact, all of the Crusaders' hits were made in that frame as Allen Sheetz, relief pitcher, twirled no-run, no-hit ball in the last four frames.

During the "big inning" Jimmie Brown and Carter Banks collected two hits each. The Crusaders drove Bill Whiteman to cover before Sheetz came in to whiff Yates but Brown's second single drove in two more runs before the fire was put out.

Lacy's-Amvets Play Today

Banks went the route for the Crusaders, yielding five hits. "Nebs" George homered off Bill Mann with two aboard in the 2nd and Lou Riehl and Lee rapped two-baggers for the Amvets. Mann was the winning pitcher.

The Amvets are scheduled to play Lacy's Delicatets today on the Rolling Mill diamond. A victory would place Lacy's one-half game out of first place.

Reed's Electricians tightened their grip on third place by walloping North End, 16-7. Gene Basillo was the "big gun" in this game with two triples, a double and two singles. Gene Scaletta rapped a two-bagger and two singles while "Chug" Aman obtained two of North End's six hits.

Underdonk Wins 20th

Lacy's Delicatets brushed aside Ballard's Cleaners, 10-4, and Bill Underdonk notched his 20th win of the season as Astor Cab took the measure of Astor Restaurant, 8-5. "Lippy" Humbertson, formerly of the Corner Merchants, belted a homer with two aboard and also smacked a single for the Cabbies. Johnny Cox rapped two singles and Harry Dean hammered a triple for the winners while Cramblitt got two of the losers' seven blows. The scores:

The Sportlight by GRANTLAND RICE

Game Called

Game called by darkness — let the curtain fall,
No more remembered thunder sweeps the field.
No more the ancient echoes hear the call
To one who wore so well both sword and shield.
The Big Guy's left us with the night to face,
And there is no one who can take his place.

Game called — and silence settles on the plain.
Where is the crash of ash against the sphere?
Where is the mighty music, the refrain
That once brought joy to every waiting ear?
The Big Guy's left us, lonely in the dark,
Forever waiting for the flaming spark.

Game called—what more is there for one to say?
How dull and drab the field looks to the eye.
For one who ruled it in a golden day
Has waved his cap to bid us all good-bye.
The Big Guy's gone—by land or sky or foam
May the Great Umpire call him "safe at home."

The greatest figure the world of sport has ever known has passed from the field. Game called on account of darkness. Babe Ruth is dead.

There have been mighty champions in their day and time from John L. Sullivan to Jack Dempsey—such stars as Bobby Jones, Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson, on and on, who walked along the pathway of fame.

But there has been only one Babe Ruth—one Bambino, who caught and held the love and admiration of countless millions around the world.

From the time he appeared on the big league scene with the Boston Red Sox in 1914, to the day his playing career ended more than 20 years later, Ruth was the greatest all-around ballplayer in the history of the game. He was a brilliant left-handed pitcher—the top power hitter of all time—a star defensive outfielder who could be rated with the best.

He was the one ballplayer who was a master of offense and defense—the nonpareil in both.

But Ruth was something more than a great ballplayer. He was an emblem, a symbol. No other athlete ever approached his color, not even the colorful Jack Dempsey, who had more than his share.

Babe Ruth's appeal to the kids of this nation was something beyond belief. He loved them and the kids knew it. There was nothing phoney about his act. The kids knew the Babe was the greatest home run hitter of all time—that he was one of the greatest pitchers of all time—that he was an able pinch-hitter—that he could do more with a bat and a baseball than any player that ever lived. And the Babe could. But they also knew he was their pal.

I was present when he drove 60 miles one night before a world series game in Chicago to see a sick boy. "And if you write anything about it," he said, "I'll knock your brains out." He meant it that way.

Oddly enough, the Babe and Walter Johnson, the two stars on offense and defense, the mighty hitter and the whirlwind pitcher, died from the same cause—a tumor attached to the brain.

And once again, oddly enough, it was Babe Ruth who was Johnson's nemesis in the box and at the bat. He told me once that he had beaten Johnson six times by the scores of 1 to 0. And even the great Johnson was none too keen about facing him from the firing hill.

The True Babe

I've been a close friend of Babe Ruth since 1919, nearly 30 years ago when the Red Sox and Giants traveled north from spring training together.

The true story of Babe's life will never be written — the story of wrecked cars he left along the highway—the story of the night he came near dropping Miller Huggins off a train—the story of the $100,000 or more he lost in Cuba one racing winter. (The Babe told me it was $200,000.)

The story of the ribald, carefree Babe who ignored all traffic angles. I was riding home with Ruth one night after a game of golf. The Babe was late. He ignored red lights and everything else in a big car. I begged Babe to let me get out and take a taxi. The Babe only laughed.

"These cops are my pals," he said. "A funny thing happened yesterday. Maybe I'd had a shot or so too much. Anyway, my car stalled. A big cop came up and asked what the matter was.

"'It won't run,' I said.

"'You're drunk,' the cop said.

"'I hit him in the nose.

"'Now I know you're drunk, you so-and-so,' the cop said.

"He shoved me out of the way and drove me home."

One day the Babe was going the wrong way on a road to some golf club.

"Hey, this is a one-way street," some traffic cop hollered.

"I'm only driving one way, you dumb—," the Babe said.

The cop, enraged, came rushing up, "Oh, hello Babe," he said. "I didn't know it was you. Drive anyway you want to."

I sat one day with Babe at St. Albans, his golf club. The Babe took out a .22 rifle, and he and a pal began shooting away the door knob at a $1 a shot. The Babe missed some guy who had just opened the door by two inches. "He should have knocked," the Babe said.

Just one day with the Babe was a big adventure. There was the time he planted a small explosive bomb in some pal's car and almost blew up the place, including the Babe and myself. "I didn't know it was that strong," was all he said.

He was a rough, rowdy, swaggering figure, more profane than anyone I ever hope to meet again, with a strong sense of decency and justice and fair play. He was a sportsman, if I ever saw one. He wanted no advantage at any start.

There was the day Miller Huggins was going to fine Ruth $5,000. He had been absent two days. The fine was to be plastered after the game. All baseball writers were notified. The Babe appeared before the game, red-eyed and dazed looking. He was in terrible shape. He hit two home runs and a triple. Huggins forgot the fines.

Great Guy To Be With

These are among the true stories of Babe Ruth, who had no regard for the conventions of the common or normal man, whether this included action or words. But, beyond all this, he was open-hearted, friendly, always cheerful, a great guy to be with.

I can still hear the roar of voices wherever he was. There was nothing quiet and sedate about the Babe.

He could recall few names. "I caught back of him for 10 years," Mickey Cochrane once told me. "But he never knew my name. It was "Hello, kid."

Driving around, Babe always responded to those who called out, "Hey, Babe." His reply was "Hello, Mom," or "Hello, Pop."

"They can't forget my funny-looking pan," he said once. They won't forget his funny-looking pan soon. His records were terrific, but they meant little when compared to the man who was so far above all the records he ever set. I'v never seen him turn a mean trick.

No game will ever see his like, his equal again. He was one in many, many lifetimes. One all alone.

King Of Swat Played In Ten World Series

62 Marks Still Stand, Hit Over 700 Homers

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP)—In his 22 years in the major leagues, Babe Ruth amassed a total of 76 records, 62 of which still stand.

The Battering Bambino, who came to the New York Yankees from the Boston Red Sox in 1920, at one time held nearly every record in the art of blasting home runs.

In addition, he had many marks in runs batted in, long distance hitting other than homers, and one or two to attest to his value as a southpaw pitcher, which many present-day fans have forgotten.

Record books show that Ruth clubbed a total of 708 home runs in regular season games during his 21 years in the American League. He hit six more in two months of the 1935 season with the Boston Braves of the National League.

To this record figure of 714 homers may be added the 15 he blasted in ten world series, but which are not included in his lifetime total.

The last flash of his greatness was on May 25, 1935, at Pittsburgh when The Babe, then closing out his illustrious career with the Braves, cracked three four-baggers in successive times at bat.

As a pitcher with the Red Sox before he came to the Yankees as a batsman, Ruth pitched and won the longest game in a world series, defeating the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1916 in 14 innings. He held the record for the greatest number of consecutive scoreless innings in world series play, having had 13 in 1916 and six in 1918 for 29 innings.

Played In 10 Classics

Ruth participated in more world series than any other player—three with the Red Sox and seven with the Yankees. He batted more than .300 in the most series—six—and held the highest batting percentage for a single series, .625, made in 1928 against the St. Louis Cardinals. He scored the most runs in world series games, the most in a single series, and the most in a single series game.

The Babe also batted in the most runs, 33, and the most in a single series, 10. His 15 round trippers are tops in world series competition as are his three in a single game which he achieved twice, in 1926 and 1928. He was far in front in almost all of the departments in total bases and long hits.

When Ruth hung up the then astounding record of 29 home runs in 1919, it brought about his purchase by Col. Jacob Ruppert and Col. Til Huston, then the owners of the Yankees. Ruth reported to Manager Miller Huggins at the Yankees' training camp at Jacksonville, Fla., in 1920.

That season he astonished the baseball world by driving 54 homers, and the next year beat that mark with 59 to help the Yankees to their first pennant. They won again in 1922 and '23 and the latter year captured their first world championship. Although he set no home run records in those years, he had a batting average of .393 in 1923, the best he ever made. That led the league.

Hit 60 Homers In 1927

It was not until 1927 that he set the major league record for homers which still stands, 60. He followed with 54 in 1928, and after that gradually slowed down. In 11 of the years he was with the Yankees, he made 40 or more homers.

On 70 occasions in his career he made two homers in a single game and on four times he slammed three in a game, twice in world series competition. On 16 occasions, he walloped home runs with the bases full, being topped only by Lou Gehrig in that department.

Cards Maintain Pennant Drive, Trim Cubs, 9-7

Stan Musial Wallops 29th Homer Of Year

CHICAGO, Aug. 16 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals maintained their pennant drive here today when they unleashed a 14-hit assault, including three homers, to defeat the Chicago Cubs, 9 to 7, before 16,447.

Stan Musial paced the Cardinal attack with his 29th home run, a double and two singles in five times up. Del Rice hammered out his fourth homer with one aboard and Erv Dusak hit his No. 5 with the bases barren. Musial's homer also found none on base.

Nine pitchers paraded to the mound in the 25-hit slugfest, four of them from the Cardinal side.

Land Owner To Appear In Court

KEYSER, W. Va.—Samuel A. Fleek, prominent Mineral County farmer and land owner is scheduled to appear before Judge Ernest A. See in Mineral County Circuit Court this morning at 10 o'clock to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court in failing to abide by a court order filed June 11 setting the price of $650 for 1.7 acres of land owned by him and giving the State Road Commission the right to go on his property to relocate a part of Mineral County Secondary Road No. 16, the Headsville Road.

The petition citing Fleek for his appearance today states that he has wilfully refused to submit to the court order to allow workers to enter upon his land. The land was appraised and condemned by a group of commissioners appointed for that purpose by counsel for the State Road Commission and Fleek's attorney.

Land Owner To Appear In Court

KEYSER, W. Va.—Samuel A. Fleek, prominent Mineral County farmer and land owner is scheduled to appear before Judge Ernest A. See in Mineral County Circuit Court this morning at 10 o'clock to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court in failing to abide by a court order filed June 11 setting the price of $650 for 1.7 acres of land owned by him and giving the State Road Commission the right to go on his property to relocate a part of Mineral County Secondary Road No. 16, the Headsville Road.

The petition citing Fleek for his appearance today states that he has wilfully refused to submit to the court order to allow workers to enter upon his land. The land was appraised and condemned by a group of commissioners appointed for that purpose by counsel for the State Road Commission and Fleek's attorney.

Fleek contested the price set for the land and requested the court to appoint another group of commissioners to appraise the land. A decision on his request has not been given by Judge See.

Many had attended special schools of public administration. Thirty-one percent were graduate engineers. The 126 managers who left their positions in 1947 had held them an average of 5 years and 9 months.

Of the 216 managers appointed in 1946, 71% had had previous public experience.

Most managers belong to the International City Managers' Association, which conducts research activities, publishes a monthly technical magazine and promotes correspondence courses to help managers provide still better government.

Code Of Ethics Adopted

In order that city managers might maintain a high standard of professional conduct, a 10-point code of ethics has been adopted by the Association, including:

"The city manager is in no sense a political leader. In order that policy may be intelligent and effective, he provides the council with information and advice, but he encourages positive decisions on policy by the council instead of passive acceptance of his recommendations.

"The city manager realizes that it is the council, the elected representatives of the people, which is entitled to the credit for the fulfillment of municipal policies. He leaves to the council the defense of policies which may be criticized."

Sewer Fund Aid May Be Sought

Through its chairman, James Alfred Avirett, the Municipal Planning and Zoning Commission yesterday formally recommended that the city investigate the possibility of qualifying for federal financial aid under the recently passed federal water pollution control law.

In another letter to the Mayor and Council, the commission also formally recommended a city-wide traffic survey.

The water pollution law recently passed by Congress makes $22,500,000 a year available for five years for loans in connection with municipal sewage plant construction, Avirett explained to the council.

Also $1,000,000 a year is available for five years for grants to help finance engineering costs and preparation of plans and specifications for sewage construction.

The council heard a complaint from Mrs. F. H. Ankeney about tall grass and weeds growing on the corner of Cumberland and Saratoga Streets. She pointed out that the lot was a breeding place for mosquitos as well as being unsightly for a residential section.

Her letter was referred to Dr. Winter R. Frantz, health officer.

The weekly water consumption report stated that 83,490,000 gallons were used as compared to 86,701,000 gallons used the same week in 1947.

TERPS CRY "FOUL" IN GAMBINO CASE

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Aug. 16—(AP)—The University of Maryland cried "foul" today and decided to ask Southern Conference eligibility umpires to look again at the case of Lu Gambino, star halfback of the Terrapin football machine.

Col. William Couper of Virginia Military Institute, who is president of the conference, ruled that Gambino's three years of varsity competition ran out last season.

Dr. Harry C. Byrd, president of Maryland, said the question would be appealed to the conference executive committee at its September meeting.

The point in dispute is a year the jolting Gambino put in on the Indiana football squad in 1942.

He and Jim Tatum, Maryland's head coach, contend it was a freshman year—although Indiana didn't have a freshman team that year and Gambino did some messing around with the varsity.

"They just used us as a scrimmage team for the varsity," Gambino explained. "Cannon fodder. I don't see how they can rule me ineligible just because of that."

Jim Demaret Beats Greiner In Playoff In St. Paul Open

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug 16 (AP)—Experience and ability to play under pressure paid off today for Jimmy Demaret, who took first money of $2,450 from Otto Greiner, Baltimore, in the playoff of the St. Paul Open Golf Tournament.

Demaret shot a four-under par 68 while Greiner was carding his poorest round of the tourney for a 70. The finished the scheduled 72 holes of the open tied at 273 yesterday forcing them into the 18-hole playoff.

Greiner's 70 of today was his poorest round. His best round of the tournament came on the third day when he shot a five-under-par 67. His first-day round was a 68, then came a 69, followed by his 67 and a 69 Sunday put him into the tie with Demaret.

Demaret pushed himself into the tie Sunday by a birdie four on the 18th hole.

Vandalism Reported At City Playground

Complaints of vandalism occuring at the North End Playground were made by Guy F. Long, field official, when he appeared before Acting Mayor William J. Edwards and the council yesterday.

Long told the council that the playground equipment was being destroyed and defaced. The bleachers and toilets are practically ruined, he said.

The council agreed to take some action on the case soon.

An order was passed declaring that properties fronting on Holland Street from its intersection with Sylvan Avenue to its intersection with Shawnee Avenue will be exempt from sewer frontage charge.

Because the street was a WPA project in 1939 no liens were filed against property owners so only tappage fee will be assessed.

The council approved an order by Commissioner William V. Keegan that $1,562.40 be paid to American-LaFrance-Foamite Corporation for replacement of a fire engine motor.

Thomas L. Popp asked that construction of a sewer from Avondale Avenue along Winifred Road be started as soon as possible.

Popp was told to discuss the matter with the city engineer and to produce a written petition from the property owners who are willing to pay sewage fees.

New Bus Terminal Will Open Today

Cumberland's new bus terminal, located in the Southern Hotel building on North Mechanic Street, will be opened today at 12:15 p. m. with an inspection by the public scheduled at 2 p. m., according to Henry W. Price, district manager of the Potomac Edison Company, which operates the Blue Ridge Bus Lines.

Price said that actual operation of the new terminal will start at midnight tonight, with Blue Ridge Buses and buses of six other companies using the facilities.

Officials of the Blue Ridge, associated bus lines, Potomac Edison Company, the Mayor and City Council of Cumberland and other guests will inspect the terminal and attend a luncheon in the terminal restaurant. Following the luncheon the public may inspect the premises.

Remodeling work on the bus terminal began several months ago and the project cost approximately $45,000. Space is available for loading and unloading passengers from a large number of buses and parking space is also available for many vehicles. Buses enter the terminal from North Mechanic Street and leave by way of North Centre Street.

Price said that a traffic hazard caused by use of the former terminal on Frederick Street is eliminated by use of the new depot.

The Blue Ridge Bus Lines has leased the bus terminal from Frank B. Vandegrift and will in turn sublease facilities to six other bus lines, including Blue and White Lines, Reynolds Bus Lines, Albright Bus Lines, Somerset Bus Lines and Cumberland and Westernport Transportation Company.

Charles Linaburg, of the Blue Ridge Lines, will be supervisor of the new terminal. He held the same position at the Frederick Street terminal. The depot will handle about 150 buses daily. These will include a large number of C. & W. buses which transport hundreds of persons to and from the Georges Creek section to Cumberland.

A large waiting room, rest rooms, lockers and a restaurant are included in the terminal. The restaurant is being operated independently by the Sheehe interests which conduct the restaurant at the corner of North Mechanic and Frederick Streets adjacent to the old terminal.

Air Mail Rates Lower Sept. 1

If Cumberlanders will hold off sending their airmail packages until September 1, they will get bargain prices, according to Cumberland Postmaster William C. McDermott.

Until then, the sender will have to pay first class rates of 5 cents an ounce or $1.60 for a two-pound package going to Chicago, in Postal Zone 4 from Cumberland. When the Air Mail Parcel Post Act of June 29 goes into effect September 1, that same package going to Chicago will only require $.79 postage.

The parcel post rates will be fixed according to postal zone. Articles weighing over eight ounces but not more than one pound will need 55 cents postage with four cents charged for every additional pound up to the air mail limit of 70 pounds if they are going to zones one or two.

Other zone rates will be: Zone three, 60 cents basic and eight cents for every additional pound; zone four, 65 cents and 14 cents for extra poundage; zone five, 70 cents with 24 cents; zone six, 75 cents and 33 cents; zone seven, 75 cents and 45 cents, and zone eight, 80 cents and 65 cents.

First class airmail rates have been changed to coincide with the parcel post rates except when that would result in the charge being less than three cents an ounce. In this case, postage will be a straight three cents an ounce.

However, the three-cent rule results in the heavier packages being more expensive by first class mail because the parcel post prices are, in most cases, below the first class minimum.

The Air Mail Parcel Post rates do not apply to mailable matter less than eight ounces or more than 70 pounds in weight or measuring more than 100 inches in width and length combined.

ager Harrell and others like him were able to double their pay during the depression years is they know their jobs. Of the 560 managers at the end of 1946 whose education was known, 48% had at least one college degree.

Many had attended special schools of public administration. Thirty-one percent were graduate engineers. The 126 managers who left their positions in 1947 had held them an average of 5 years and 9 months.

Of the 216 managers appointed in 1946, 71% had had previous public experience.

Most managers belong to the International City Managers' Association, which conducts research activities, publishes a monthly technical magazine and promotes correspondence courses to help managers provide still better government.

Code Of Ethics Adopted

In order that city managers might maintain a high standard of professional conduct, a 10-point code of ethics has been adopted by the Association, including:

"The city manager is in no sense a political leader. In order that policy may be intelligent and effective, he provides the council with information and advice, but he encourages positive decisions on policy by the council instead of passive acceptance of his recommendations.

"The city manager realizes that it is the council, the elected representatives of the people, which is entitled to the credit for the fulfillment of municipal policies. He leaves to the council the defense of policies which may be criticized."

Sewer Fund Aid May Be Sought

Through its chairman, James Alfred Avirett, the Municipal Planning and Zoning Commission yesterday formally recommended that the city investigate the possibility of qualifying for federal financial aid under the recently passed federal water pollution control law.

In another letter to the Mayor and Council, the commission also formally recommended a city-wide traffic survey.

The water pollution law recently passed by Congress makes $22,500,000 a year available for five years for loans in connection with municipal sewage plant construction, Avirett explained to the council.

Also $1,000,000 a year is available for five years for grants to help finance engineering costs and preparation of plans and specifications for sewage construction.

The council heard a complaint from Mrs. F. H. Ankeney about tall grass and weeds growing on the corner of Cumberland and Saratoga Streets. She pointed out that the lot was a breeding place for mosquitos as well as being unsightly for a residential section.

Her letter was referred to Dr. Winter R. Frantz, health officer.

The weekly water consumption report stated that 83,490,000 gallons were used as compared to 86,701,000 gallons used the same week in 1947.

TERPS CRY "FOUL" IN GAMBINO CASE

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Aug. 16—(AP)—The University of Maryland cried "foul" today and decided to ask Southern Conference eligibility umpires to look again at the case of Lu Gambino, star halfback of the Terrapin football machine.

Col. William Couper of Virginia Military Institute, who is president of the conference, ruled that Gambino's three years of varsity competition ran out last season.

Dr. Harry C. Byrd, president of Maryland, said the question would be appealed to the conference executive committee at its September meeting.

The point in dispute is a year the jolting Gambino put in on the Indiana football squad in 1942.

He and Jim Tatum, Maryland's head coach, contend it was a freshman year—although Indiana didn't have a freshman team that year and Gambino did some messing around with the varsity.

"They just used us as a scrimmage team for the varsity," Gambino explained. "Cannon fodder. I don't see how they can rule me ineligible just because of that."

Capt. McIsaac Leads Ship To Victory

Capt. J. M. McIsaac, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Alban C. Thompson, 208 Saratoga Street, was the commander of the U. S. S. Spokane which was awarded a battle efficiency pennant as winner of the first postwar fleet training contest, according to a Navy Department announcement yesterday.

A total of more than $2,000 was won by 48 ships and 12 aircraft squadrons. The money will go into the recreational funds of the ships winning the prizes.

Jim Demaret Beats Greiner In Playoff In St. Paul Open

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug 16 (AP)—Experience and ability to play under pressure paid off today for Jimmy Demaret, who took first money of $2,450 from Otto Greiner, Baltimore, in the playoff of the St. Paul Open Golf Tournament.

Demaret shot a four-under par 68 while Greiner was carding his poorest round of the tourney for a 70. The finished the scheduled 72 holes of the open tied at 273 yesterday forcing them into the 18-hole playoff.

Greiner's 70 of today was his poorest round. His best round of the tournament came on the third day when he shot a five-under-par 67. His first-day round was a 68, then came a 69, followed by his 67 and a 69 Sunday put him into the tie with Demaret.

Demaret pushed himself into the tie Sunday by a birdie four on the 18th hole.

Vandalism Reported At City Playground

Complaints of vandalism occuring at the North End Playground were made by Guy F. Long, field official, when he appeared before Acting Mayor William J. Edwards and the council yesterday.

Long told the council that the playground equipment was being destroyed and defaced. The bleachers and toilets are practically ruined, he said.

The council agreed to take some action on the case soon.

An order was passed declaring that properties fronting on Holland Street from its intersection with Sylvan Avenue to its intersection with Shawnee Avenue will be exempt from sewer frontage charge.

Because the street was a WPA project in 1939 no liens were filed against property owners so only tappage fee will be assessed.

The council approved an order by Commissioner William V. Keegan that $1,562.40 be paid to American-LaFrance-Foamite Corporation for replacement of a fire engine motor.

Thomas L. Popp asked that construction of a sewer from Avondale Avenue along Winifred Road be started as soon as possible.

Popp was told to discuss the matter with the city engineer and to produce a written petition from the property owners who are willing to pay sewage fees.

New Bus Terminal Will Open Today

Cumberland's new bus terminal, located in the Southern Hotel building on North Mechanic Street, will be opened today at 12:15 p. m. with an inspection by the public scheduled at 2 p. m., according to Henry W. Price, district manager of the Potomac Edison Company, which operates the Blue Ridge Bus Lines.

Price said that actual operation of the new terminal will start at midnight tonight, with Blue Ridge Buses and buses of six other companies using the facilities.

Officials of the Blue Ridge, associated bus lines, Potomac Edison Company, the Mayor and City Council of Cumberland and other guests will inspect the terminal and attend a luncheon in the terminal restaurant. Following the luncheon the public may inspect the premises.

Remodeling work on the bus terminal began several months ago and the project cost approximately $45,000. Space is available for loading and unloading passengers from a large number of buses and parking space is also available for many vehicles. Buses enter the terminal from North Mechanic Street and leave by way of North Centre Street.

Price said that a traffic hazard caused by use of the former terminal on Frederick Street is eliminated by use of the new depot.

The Blue Ridge Bus Lines has leased the bus terminal from Frank B. Vandegrift and will in turn sublease facilities to six other bus lines, including Blue and White Lines, Reynolds Bus Lines, Albright Bus Lines, Somerset Bus Lines and Cumberland and Westernport Transportation Company.

Charles Linaburg, of the Blue Ridge Lines, will be supervisor of the new terminal. He held the same position at the Frederick Street terminal. The depot will handle about 150 buses daily. These will include a large number of C. & W. buses which transport hundreds of persons to and from the Georges Creek section to Cumberland.

A large waiting room, rest rooms, lockers and a restaurant are included in the terminal. The restaurant is being operated independently by the Sheehe interests which conduct the restaurant at the corner of North Mechanic and Frederick Streets adjacent to the old terminal.

West Side Home Is Ransacked

City Police are probing the breaking and entering of the home of Mrs. Othalis Hendley, 511 Patterson Avenue, between 12:30 a. m. and 10:30 p. m. Sunday.

Police said entrance was gained through a cellar window. Contents of a china closet were scattered over the dining room and a drawer was ransacked, but nothing was missing.

Air Mail Rates Lower Sept. 1

If Cumberlanders will hold off sending their airmail packages until September 1, they will get bargain prices, according to Cumberland Postmaster William C. McDermott.

Until then, the sender will have to pay first class rates of 5 cents an ounce or $1.60 for a two-pound package going to Chicago, in Postal Zone 4 from Cumberland. When the Air Mail Parcel Post Act of June 29 goes into effect September 1, that same package going to Chicago will only require $.79 postage.

The parcel post rates will be fixed according to postal zone. Articles weighing over eight ounces but not more than one pound will need 55 cents postage with four cents charged for every additional pound up to the air mail limit of 70 pounds if they are going to zones one or two.

Other zone rates will be: Zone three, 60 cents basic and eight cents for every additional pound; zone four, 65 cents and 14 cents for extra poundage; zone five, 70 cents with 24 cents; zone six, 75 cents and 33 cents; zone seven, 75 cents and 45 cents, and zone eight, 80 cents and 65 cents.

First class airmail rates have been changed to coincide with the parcel post rates except when that would result in the charge being less than three cents an ounce. In this case, postage will be a straight three cents an ounce.

However, the three-cent rule results in the heavier packages being more expensive by first class mail because the parcel post prices are, in most cases, below the first class minimum.

The Air Mail Parcel Post rates do not apply to mailable matter less than eight ounces or more than 70 pounds in weight or measuring more than 100 inches in width and length combined.

Valli

Robert Ryan is the star selected for this prize-fight thriller based on the well-known poem by Joseph Moncure March, told with the same tense suspense of "Sorry, Wrong Number," the entire plot covers only 80 minutes in the life of a fighter and will take exactly 80 minutes to tell on the screen.

Ryan is a good boy for the role of the fighter who sells out to a group of gamblers before he decides not to throw a fight. When Bob was in college he told me he was undefeated heavyweight collegiate champ for four years and that he taught boxing in the Marines. He will have Richard Goldstone as his producer and Robert Wise as his director.

I was questioned again and again about Alida Valli in Italy. Did I like her? How does the American public feel about her?

Those were questions I answered with promptness. I stated I had interviewed her when she arrived in Hollywood, and that I was the first to say she was the most sensational addition to the screen of the year.

They love Valli in Rome and want her to make a picture there since she is probably their most popular screen actress. The Italians will get their wish, too, because after she finishes starring in "The Third Man" with Joseph Cotton in England, David Selznick plans to send her to Rome to make a movie.

Alexis Smith tells me she is planing out of her tomorrow to visit Penticton, British Columbia, where she first saw the light of day. She hasn't been home since she was ten, and she will reach there in time for the peach festival.

What Alexis may not know is that, although she has just finished "South of St. Louis," she is to be the gal in Errol Flynn's life in "Montana."

"The fans," Steve Trilling told me, "liked the Flynn-Smith combination so much in 'San Antonio' that we decided to do a repeat in 'Montana'."

I was amused to read that Ali, the son of the fabulously wealthy Aga Khan, was courting Rita Hayworth. When I saw Rita in Cannes, she had not even met the heir to the Khan fortune. Elsa Maxwell, who was giving a dinner a few nights after we left, told me she was inviting both Rita and Ali Khan, and expected he would be fascinated with the glamorous movie gal.

Rita has never given such a performance in her life as she does in "Loves Of Carmen." She will have them standing in line at the box office.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Virginia Wells, movie starlet, is planning to marry Henry Cuh.

There wasn't a seat available for the Jennifer Jones-Louis Jourdan play, "Serene Blandish," at La Jolla. Those who are at Del Mar were offering a fortune for seats.

Audrey Totter has gone to the family homestead in Joliet, Illinois.

Burt Lancaster's first independent movie, "The Unafraid," went over very big at the preview. The employees are very grateful because they all have a cut in the movie.

The Fontana sisters of Rome have designed Myrna Loy's clothes for "The Case Of Lady Brooke," now called "Autumn."

Lina Romay is dating Risque De La Vega, who used to go with Gloria Lloyd.

Harry Warner has checked in at the Turf and Surf hotel at Del Mar for the rest of the season. Seems everyone is in Del Mar.

Clifton Webb goes east after he finishes "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College" at 20th, and he will sail for Europe on a vacation. Before he sails, however, he will edit his book, which is an autobiography, and should be mighty amusing.

Kurt Kreuger sends word that he escorted Lili Damita to a ball on the French Riviera. At the party were the Darryl Zanucks, Rita Hayworth, Sonja Henie, Ed Gardner, the Eddie Robinsons and Charlie Feldman—just like old home week. Kurt may make a picture in Italy.

KEEPING UP WITH

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 16—(INS)—Just when we all thought everything around the RKO lot was so slow that the daisies would soon start pushing up, the "go" signal comes from Howard Hughes to start "The Set Up" September 15.

Valli

Robert Ryan is the star selected for this prize-fight thriller based on the well-known poem by Joseph Moncure March, told with the same tense suspense of "Sorry, Wrong Number," the entire plot covers only 80 minutes in the life of a fighter and will take exactly 80 minutes to tell on the screen.

Ryan is a good boy for the role of the fighter who sells out to a group of gamblers before he decides not to throw a fight. When Bob was in college he told me he was undefeated heavyweight collegiate champ for four years and that he taught boxing in the Marines. He will have Richard Goldstone as his producer and Robert Wise as his director.

Gen. Eisenhower To Participate In Radio Show

By GEORGE TUCKER
(FOR C. E. BUTTERFIELD)

NEW YORK, Aug. 17 (AP)—General Dwight D. Eisenhower has cancelled part of his vacation to participate in an hour-long "Crusade For Children" over CBS at 10 tonight.

The General is the principal speaker and will be joined by scores of celebrities in a variety program broadcast in behalf of "American Overseas Aid—United Nations Appeal."

Ike appears three times in the program. With him will be Dinah Shore, Arthur Godfrey, Dorothy Kirsten, Ed Murrow, Rosalind Russell, Madeleine Carroll, and others. Beneficiaries of the appeal are the children of Europe whose countries, homes, and families were wrecked in the war.

The great great grandson of Rip Van Winkle says it isn't so. He will attempt to persuade historians, and the public, that Rip did not sleep twenty years on "We the People," CBS, at 9 p. m. Howard Van Winkle, the decendant, claims he has proof—and plenty of it.

•—•—•

Should college football be subsidized? This question will be debated on "America's Town Meeting," tonight at 8:30 over ABC. Harry Wismer, famed sports announcer, and George S. Halas, owner and coach of the Chicago Bears, are on the affirmative. Fritz Chrisler, Michigan athletic director, and "Pop" Houston, professor of constitutional law at Iowa university argue the negative.

RADIO IN REVIEW

By JOHN CROSBY

The Bottom Rung

John Crosby

N.B.C. guides, the handsome, spotless, suave young men who conduct tours through the vast rabbit warren of Radio City in New York, make up their own spiels. They are equipped with a manual jammed full of terribly uninteresting information but not all of them pay much attention to it. Some of the quick-witted boys have preferred to make up their own statistics as they went along and rarely did it make any difference as to whether there were 14,000 square yards of carpet on the seventh floor or 100,000.

Once in awhile, they came to grief. One man asked Tommy McFadden to explain a ribbon microphone. McFadden, who had never heard of the thing, instantly plunged into a technical, plausible, wholly inaccurate description of the inner workings of ribbon microphones. Later he was taken aside by his questioner, who happened to be a radio technician, and advised to bone up on the subject.

Some years ago in a movie there was a scene in which Gene Raymond asked for a job at N.B.C. He was asked if he knew four languages, possessed a master's degree and had read the Encyclopedia Britanica from cover to cover. Eagerly he answered all these questions in the affirmative and, in the next shot, he was conducting a tour dressed in the handsome uniform of an N.B.C. guide. Actually, the requirements for page boys and guides were not quite so rigid but nevertheless N.B.C. through no fault of its own acquired some very well educated young men at $85 a month.

Their sleek appearance and smooth chatter had a devastating effect on young ladies from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, many of whom harbored secret ambitions to be on the radio. Guides always singled out the prettiest of their young feminine charges, paid special attention to them on the tour and usually wound up taking them to dinner.

Several of them married girls they met on tours through N.B.C. (One of them was Dorian St. George, now an A.B.C. announcer.) Tommy McFadden almost married another tourist, but her mother, feeling that an N.B.C. guide was not quite what she had in mind for her daughter, whisked her back to Wisconsin. This may have been a mistake, since McFadden is now manager of WNBC, N.B.C.'s key station in New York, and is doing very well.

N.B.C.'s high-quality, low-paid guide and page staff naturally don't cherish the idea of remaining in the same job for very long. The turnover of pages and guides has always been high, the present staff of thirty-three representing a 100 per cent turnover in the last year. A great many pages and guides hanker after announcing jobs. Since they encounter the higher echelons at N.B.C. practically not at all, their only opportunity to impress a vice-president is on the rare occasions when one happens to be hurrying by. Every time this happens the guides begin emitting noises like H. V. Kaltenborn.

N.B.C.'s chief announcer, Pat Kelly, has been running classes for pages and guides for many years. After a twenty-week course, Kelly puts the page's voice on a record and sends it out to small stations throughout the country. Several hundred of Kelly's pupils have gone to small stations as announcers and then worked their way back to New York, where many of them earn sizable salaries.

During the war, the guides were replaced by guidettes. The girls almost unanimously wanted to be radio actresses. "They were always emoting between floors," one N.B.C. man declared. Few of them got anywhere. There are now ten girls on the guide staff, still trying.

The high point on the guide tour, both for the tourists and the guides, is the demonstration of sound effects. For some reason every radio listener appears to be intolerably curious about how the slamming door effect is actually achieved. (They slam a door.) Here the guide is on his own with a roomful of sound equipment to put on his own show. The frustrated actors among them made up skits and some of them were pretty good. Most of them, however, just tried their level best to scare some one to death and while no one has ever accomplished this notable aim, the boys are still trying.

Gen. Eisenhower To Participate In Radio Show

By GEORGE TUCKER
(FOR C. E. BUTTERFIELD)

NEW YORK, Aug. 17 (AP)—General Dwight D. Eisenhower has cancelled part of his vacation to participate in an hour-long "Crusade For Children" over CBS at 10 tonight.

The General is the principal speaker and will be joined by scores of celebrities in a variety program broadcast in behalf of "American Overseas Aid—United Nations Appeal."

Ike appears three times in the program. With him will be Dinah Shore, Arthur Godfrey, Dorothy Kirsten, Ed Murrow, Rosalind Russell, Madeleine Carroll, and others. Beneficiaries of the appeal are the children of Europe whose countries, homes, and families were wrecked in the war.

The great great grandson of Rip Van Winkle says it isn't so. He will attempt to persuade historians, and the public, that Rip did not sleep twenty years on "We the People," CBS, at 9 p. m. Howard Van Winkle, the decendant, claims he has proof—and plenty of it.

•—•—•

Should college football be subsidized? This question will be debated on "America's Town Meeting," tonight at 8:30 over ABC. Harry Wismer, famed sports announcer, and George S. Halas, owner and coach of the Chicago Bears, are on the affirmative. Fritz Chrisler, Michigan athletic director, and "Pop" Houston, professor of constitutional law at Iowa university argue the negative.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, W. F. Alexander, who passed away August 17, 1941.
Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow,
Love keeps him ever near us
Though he left us 7 years ago.
Sadly missed by his wife and family,
Mrs. W. F. Alexander,
Mr. & Mrs. Marshall Alexander,
Mr. & Mrs. Harry Alexander,
Granddaughters, Ruth Marlee and Dietra Ann Alexander.

In remembrance of our loving sons Francis C. and Andrew J. Brown, who passed away August 17, 1934.
We never shall forget you
Whom we loved and could not save;
But God wanted you, dear Sons,
So He called you away just 14 years ago today.
Sadly missed by your Mother,
Lily Ann Brown and Family.

Stock Trading Drops To Lowest Level In Period Of Four Years

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP)—Trading activity in the stock exchange dropped to the lowest level in nearly four years today.

Only 460,000 shares of stock changed hands. Previous low was 345,000 shares on September 18, 1944. Friday's volume amounted to an even 500,000 shares.

Issues closing higher included U. S. Steel at 76⅜, Republic Steel 27½, Chrysler 58½, Goodyear 42⅞, Sears Roebuck 37½, Lockheed 21, American Telephone 152⅜, Kennecott Copper 56¼, American Smelting 58, General Electric 38⅝, Philip Morris (at a new high for the year) 35, Radio Corp. 12, Santa Fe 109¾, Rock Island 37, Pan American Airways 9½.

On the losing side were General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, Schenley, American Can, American Woolen, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Standard Oil (NJ), Richfield Oil, and United Airlines.

Trading interest in the bond market slid to a 31-year low.

Only $1,710,000, face value, of bonds changed hands in the five-hour session on the New York stock exchange. This was the smallest volume of dealings since 1917.

Activity has dwindled in recent weeks, especially last week after Federal Reserve rediscount rates were increased and banks lifted their rates on short-term commercial loans. Last Friday's sales of $1,971,000 were the scantiest since August 19, 1940.

U. S. Government obligations stayed close to previous levels, although the 2½s of September, 1967-72, recovered 2-32 to 101 12-32 bid in the over-the-counter market.

DeGroot Will Return From Coast Today

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Aug 16 — Dudley S. DeGroot, new West Virginia University football coach, is scheduled to arrive on the campus tomorrow from California to ready plans for pre-season practice by the Mountaineer varsity.

Approximately 60 candidates have been invited to report here Monday, August 23, for a week's preliminary work. On August 29, after the squad has been pruned, DeGroot will take his hopefuls to the State 4-H Camp at Jackson's Mill for two weeks' training. In all, the Mountaineers will have four weeks to prepare for their season's opener against Waynesburg College here September 18.

DeGroot's return to Morgantown was delayed by the critical illness of his father. The Mountaineer mentor, who went west in June to close out his personal affairs, had planned to be back on August 1.

Stock Trading Drops To Lowest Level In Period Of Four Years

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP)—Trading activity in the stock exchange dropped to the lowest level in nearly four years today.

Only 460,000 shares of stock changed hands. Previous low was 345,000 shares on September 18, 1944. Friday's volume amounted to an even 500,000 shares.

Wall Street generally figures that on the whole it's operating in the red unless trading on the exchange reaches at least 1,000,000 shares a day. The break-even point, of course, varies from one house to another.

Issues closing higher included U. S. Steel at 76⅜, Republic Steel 27½, Chrysler 58½, Goodyear 42⅞, Sears Roebuck 37½, Lockheed 21, American Telephone 152⅜, Kennecott Copper 56¼, American Smelting 58, General Electric 38⅝, Philip Morris (at a new high for the year) 35, Radio Corp. 12, Santa Fe 109¾, Rock Island 37, Pan American Airways 9½.

On the losing side were General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, Schenley, American Can, American Woolen, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Standard Oil (NJ), Richfield Oil, and United Airlines.

Trading interest in the bond market slid to a 31-year low.

Only $1,710,000, face value, of bonds changed hands in the five-hour session on the New York stock exchange. This was the smallest volume of dealings since 1917.

Activity has dwindled in recent weeks, especially last week after Federal Reserve rediscount rates were increased and banks lifted their rates on short-term commercial loans. Last Friday's sales of $1,971,000 were the scantiest since August 19, 1940.

U. S. Government obligations stayed close to previous levels, although the 2½s of September, 1967-72, recovered 2-32 to 101 12-32 bid in the over-the-counter market.

On August 29, after the squad has been pruned, DeGroot will take his hopefuls to the State 4-H Camp at Jackson's Mill for two weeks' training. In all, the Mountaineers will have four weeks to prepare for their season's opener against Waynesburg College here September 18.

State Inspector Claims Gas Caused Mine Blast

Electric Spark Ignited Methane

"Methane gas, ignited from an open type mine motor," was the cause of the explosion at Waynesburg Mine No. 5, Knapp's Meadow, near Lonaconing Saturday, which took the lives of three mine foremen, according to Frank T. Powers, Frostburg, state mine inspector.

The explosion occurred Saturday shortly after 9 a. m. and resulted in the death of Robert "Buster" Dodds, 42, Detmold; George Loar, 38, Dan's Mountain, and Bernard Smith, 47, Zihlman. Six rescue squads from Allegany and Garrett County coal operations were rushed to the scene and assisted in rescue operations.

Powers said last night that federal, state and district inspectors made a two-day investigation at the mines and he believes the explosion was caused by gas, ignited by a spark from the electrically-driven mine motor which was used for traction.

Contradicts "No Gas" Belief

Powers said "Many old miners on the Georges Creek argue that there is no gas in Georges Creek mines, but this explosion was definitely a gas explosion."

The mine inspector explained that "the blast was caused by the ignition of gas in Room No. 2 off the third left heading, and was possibly caused from an open type mine motor being used by the three foremen to take a rock duster into the mines."

The men, all foremen and charged with the safety of the mines, were carrying out a safety precaution at the time of the blast, Powers explained. They were rock dusting the mines, an operation which involved the dusting of the walls, floor, etc., with rock dust to keep the coal dust down. Coal dust in the air is a frequent cause of explosions, Powers explained.

The foremen had their duster about 50 feet from the face of Room No. 2, when the blast came, Powers said. He expressed the opinion the men had not checked for gas before they entered the place.

The blast was confined to a small area, inspectors said, and did not spread through the mines. The rock dusting the men had done, and water on main headings helped prevent a more serious explosion and slowed the explosion. Powers explained the explosion appeared to be a slow-burning blast with not much force.

No Rock Falls

No wires were down in the mines, there were no rock falls which frequently follow mine explosions, and nothing was damaged, except seven or eight stoppings (parts of the ventilating system), which were blown out.

Powers said the three foremen had tried to escape the blast and crawled a considerable distance from the scene before they collapsed. He is of the opinion that carbon monoxide gas generated by the explosion was a contributing factor to their deaths, as well as burns received in the explosion.

Accompanying Powers Sunday were Daniel Walker, chief inspector for the United States Bureau of Mines of the Fairmont, W. Va., district, and Federal Inspectors Thomas McDonald and William Baldwin, also of Fairmont.

Yesterday, Powers, McDonald and Baldwin were accompanied by Clyde J. Rowe, Westernport, district inspector, on a second trip into the pit.

Federal inspectors issued no public statement as it is the policy of the Mine Bureau to issue written statements after blueprints and reports are completed.

Speeding Blamed In Fatal Crash

An inquest into the death of a Green Spring, W. Va., youth yesterday established that the automobile accident which caused his death Saturday night was due in part to excessive speed.

The youth, Eskin Cannon, 19, died as a result of injuries sustained when a car driven by Jack Hottel, 20, Berkeley Springs, crashed against a bridge near Romney.

Hampshire County Prosecuting Attorney J. F. Zimmerman stated last night that no charges have been filed yet and expressed the belief that the matter will be investigated further when the Grand Jury convenes next month.

Trooper F. H. Tribett, who investigated with Trooper E. D. Harbert, said the driver claimed he was blinded by the headlights of a large truck as he rounded the curve leading to the bridge.

Hottel is still a patient at Memorial Hospital, where he was admitted after the accident. Two 16-year-old passengers, both residents of Berkeley Springs, were also treated at the hospital after the accident.

Local Boy Receives Navy Scholarship

An Allegany High School graduate, James Bell, Route 6, Narrows Park, will enter the University of Utah September 18 under a Navy scholarship.

About 48,000 American boys took the competitive examination for the scholarships. Those winning will be members of the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps in 52 schools selected for the program. Upon graduation, they will be commissioned as ensigns and will serve at least two years with the Regular Navy.

Bell was a member of the Allegany High School track team and plans to study civil engineering. He has just returned from a seven-week stay at Camp Deerwood, Mich., which is affiliated with the Northwestern Preparatory School for boys planning to enter service academies.

Missing Woman Found On Farm Near Her Home

81-Year-Old In "Good" Condition

Mrs. Agnes Burkey, 81-year-old Parsons, W. Va., woman missing from her home since Friday, was found yesterday—her 63d wedding anniversary—by a 13-year-old farm boy.

West Virginia State Police said Mrs. Burkey was found by Roy Harper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Harper, on the Harper farm six miles from Parsons. The elder Harper had noticed that some of his cattle in a field 300 yards behind the farmhouse seemed disturbed, and sent the boy to investigate.

The boy found Mrs. Burkey, suffering from shock and exposure, wandering aimlessly through the field on her hands and knees. When the boy asked her what she was doing, she said she was looking for her husband.

She was taken to Tucker County Hospital at Parsons, where her condition was described as "good." Attaches said she had bruises on the hands and face. She was admitted for observation.

Police reported that the search was centering in the area in which the elderly woman was found, as James Johnson, Montrose, W. Va., reported seeing her in that section at about 8 p. m. Sunday.

Over 200 persons, including State Police, firemen, Forestry Department employes and Boy Scouts, took part in the four-day search. State Police brought bloodhounds into the search Saturday.

Mrs. Burkey's husband, Jesse, 79, said he was out cutting wood when his wife disappeared. He was not alarmed at first, he said, because he thought she had gone to pick berries.

Old Age Claim Errors Explained

"A resident of Maryland recently lost $2,069.40 in Old-Age and Survivors Insurance benefits because he delayed filing his claim," William W. Wood, manager of the Cumberland field office of the Social Security Administration, announced.

This man was over 65 years of age when he retired from employment which was covered by the Old-Age Insurance program back in January 1943. He did not file a claim at that time, according to his own statement, because he had been told that he would have to "sign away" his property.

Wood explained that this was a false impression held by many wage earners. Monthly payments under the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance program are paid for during the working life of the beneficiary. However, Wood continued, to receive these payments he must make a claim for them.

Monthly payments are only retroactive for three months prior to the month in which the claim is filed. The man who lost $2,069.40 by his delay could have received his first check for January 1943 had he filed his claim promptly. However, he did not file claim until, June 1948. The first month for which he was paid, therefore, was March 1948. In all, he lost sixty-two monthly payments.

Wood said that another Maryland man lost $449.16 by delaying to file his claim. This man spent an entire year trying to secure a birth certificate.

He added, "The Social Security Administration may require proof of age but no one should delay in filing his claim because he does not have a birth certificate. The field office of the Social Security Administration will assist the claimant in securing any age data that may be necessary."

Wood pointed out that the local office of the Social Security Administration which is located in Room 309, Postoffice Building, is maintained to serve the people who reside in Allegany and Garrett Counties in Maryland, and Grant, Hampshire, Mineral, Hardy and Pendleton Counties in West Virginia. Anyone having a problem relating to the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance program is urged to write, phone or call at this office.

City Manager Plan:

Managers Win Promotion For Showing Good Record

By RICHARD S. CHILDS
Chairman of the Council, National Municipal League

The city manager is a professional. He should not be expected to have divine wisdom but he generally possesses talent, experience, the ability to work hard and a desire to get ahead in his career. Good city managers are rewarded with higher pay and bigger jobs. Take the record of C. A. Harrell:

Years	City	Salary
1928-1930	Cincinnati (executive assistant to City Manager)	$ 4,200
1930-1932	Portsmouth, Ohio (Manager)	8,000
1932-1937	Binghamton, N. Y. (Manager)	9,000
1937-1946	Schenectady, N. Y. (Manager)	10,000
1946-	Norfolk, Virginia (Manager)	20,000

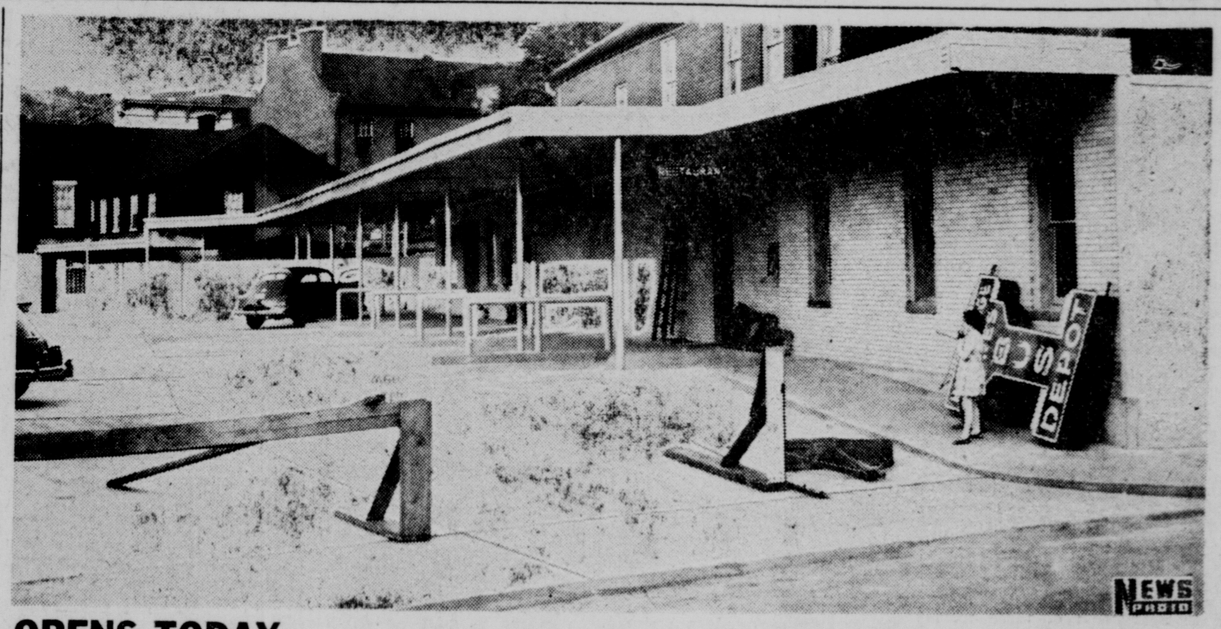

City councils demand experienced men. In 1947 two-thirds of the new manager appointments went to non-residents and there were 57 promotions from smaller cities. At the end of 1946 there were 47 managers who had managed three or more different cities.

They Borrow Good Ideas

The pool of experience is vast. Since 1912 there have been something like 2,000 managers. They have accumulated close to 15,000 years of experience. The plan is stronger today than ever because managers have developed the habit of copying each other's ideas for improved administration, and have good arrangements for getting them.

One main reason why City Man-

Kiwanis Distributes 9,000,000 Pamphlets

More than 9,000,000 patriotic pamphlets, based on a wide variety of subjects and designed to show that "It's Fun to Live in America," have been distributed by Kiwanis clubs from coast to coast since the first of the year.

This announcement was made yesterday by W. E. Landefeld, president of the Kiwanis Club of Cumberland, who said the purpose of the pamphlet campaign is to stress the importance of maintaining the individual enterprise system in the United States.

Each of the seven pamphlets that has been issued up to this time has made dramatic comparisons between America's form of government and the totalitarian theory of centralized control of business, industry, agriculture, the church, home and school, Landefeld stated.

Kiwanians throughout the nation are using the pamphlets as inserts with payroll envelopes, statements, circulars, and other correspondence. When this phase of the campaign comes to a conclusion in December, it is estimated that nearly 15,000,000 leaflets will have been circulated.

11-Year-Old Rheumatic Fever Patient Gets New Bicycle

Local Man Has Wheel Delivered To Hospital

Little Jackie Nestor has a new bicycle.

It was taken to Memorial Hospital where Jackie has been a patient for the past eight weeks, suffering from rheumatic fever, by City Police officers at the request of a local business man.

Charles Hansel, who operates the Astor Restaurant on Virginia Avenue, bought the new bicycle for Jackie after he reads in the NEWS yesterday that Jackie's new wheel had been stolen just a few days before he became seriously ill. Since then, Jackie has grieved over his loss continually.

Hensel said he believes the new bicycle might help Jackie along the road to recovery and just decided to go get him one. City Police last night commented, "Charlie does things like that. He likes kids."

The new bicycle was taken to Jackie's room and he was pretty excited over the new wheel and is now anxious to get out and ride it again. His mother, Mrs. Virginia Nestor, 314 Washington Street, a waitress in a local restaurant knew nothing about the publicity, before hand, but last night she said, "If Jackie is pleased, I guess it's all right with me."

The NEWS was besieged yesterday with telephone calls from people who wanted more information about Jackie and his missing bicycle. In fact, if someone had just said so, a half-dozen new wheels could have been obtained for him with no trouble at all. Reporters coming into the news rooms yesterday and last night said many people had commented on the situation and wanted to extend their good wishes to Jackie for a speedy recovery.

So Jackie, with his new bicycle, now has a lot of very fine people hoping he will be well and strong soon, and many people who are waiting to see him out riding his new wheel.

Former Officers Needed By Army

There are many opportunities for former officers in the newly-expanded Army program according to M. Sgt. William Rogers of the local Reserve office.

By September 30, the Army will need company grade officers and a few majors for all of their combat arms from armored units to the transportation corps. Members of the Officers Reserve Corps, National Guard officers, or officers of the Woman's Army Corps are eligible for duty, he said.

Sgt. Rogers pointed out that the maximum age limit for company officers has been raised to 50 years and for ranks above captain to 60 years. Thus, a 48-year-old man with a company rank who has not quite reached his 49th birthday may enlist for a year. If he is 47 but not yet 48, he may enlist for two years. Others, Sgt. Rogers said, must sign up for three-year periods.

Officers receiving pensions, disability allowances or disability compensation are eligible, provided they waive their pensions while on active duty and meet the physical requirements. Members of the United States Army, retired, are ineligible, however, Sgt. Rogers explained.

He also said that there are 9 to 12-month overhead assignments in the Second Army Area for former enlisted men regardless of grade, military occupational specialty or race.

Sgt. Rogers asked that all who wish to apply see him at the Army Reserve Office in the Postoffice Building. Any officer of the Army of the United States who is not a member of the Reserve may also join the ORC at the office and become eligible for the program.

Wednesday in the Hafer Funeral Home.

Shortly after Athey was injured, Raymond Devore, crossing watchman, said Athey was crossing Baltimore Street from the West to the east side.

Devore said he called to Athey to warn him of the approaching train. Athey, Devore said, was struck by a side cylinder on the engine.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy county medical examiner, said an autopsy showed that death was due to hemothorax, that is, a flooding of blood into the lung, of the left lung, caused by broken ribs and a broken pelvis.

The application did not name the prospective occupant of the structure.

Electric Spark Ignited Methane

"Methane gas, ignited from an open type mine motor," was the cause of the explosion at Waynesburg Mine No. 5, Knapp's Meadow, near Lonaconing Saturday, which took the lives of three mine foremen, according to Frank T. Powers, Frostburg, state mine inspector.

The explosion occurred Saturday shortly after 9 a. m. and resulted in the death of Robert "Buster" Dodds, 42, Detmold; George Loar, 38, Dan's Mountain, and Bernard Smith, 47, Zihlman. Six rescue squads from Allegany and Garrett County coal operations were rushed to the scene and assisted in rescue operations.

Powers said last night that federal, state and district inspectors made a two-day investigation at the mines and he believes the explosion was caused by gas, ignited by a spark from the electrically-driven mine motor which was used for traction.

Contradicts "No Gas" Belief

Powers said "Many old miners on the Georges Creek argue that there is no gas in Georges Creek mines, but this explosion was definitely a gas explosion."

The mine inspector explained that "the blast was caused by the ignition of gas in Room No. 2 off the third left heading, and was possibly caused from an open type mine motor being used by the three foremen to take a rock duster into the mines."

The men, all foremen and charged with the safety of the mines, were carrying out a safety precaution at the time of the blast, Powers explained. They were rock dusting the mines, an operation which involved the dusting of the walls, floor, etc., with rock dust to keep the coal dust down. Coal dust in the air is a frequent cause of explosions, Powers explained.

The foremen had their duster about 50 feet from the face of Room No. 2, when the blast came, Powers said. He expressed the opinion the men had not checked for gas before they entered the place.

The blast was confined to a small area, inspectors said, and did not spread through the mines. The rock dusting the men had done, and water on main headings helped prevent a more serious explosion and slowed the explosion. Powers explained the explosion appeared to be a slow-burning blast with not much force.

No Rock Falls

No wires were down in the mines, there were no rock falls which frequently follow mine explosions, and nothing was damaged, except seven or eight stoppings (parts of the ventilating system), which were blown out.

Powers said the three foremen had tried to escape the blast and crawled a considerable distance from the scene before they collapsed. He is of the opinion that carbon monoxide gas generated by the explosion was a contributing factor to their deaths, as well as burns received in the explosion.

Accompanying Powers Sunday were Daniel Walker, chief inspector for the United States Bureau of Mines of the Fairmont, W. Va., district, and Federal Inspectors Thomas McDonald and William Baldwin, also of Fairmont.

Yesterday, Powers, McDonald and Baldwin were accompanied by Clyde J. Rowe, Westernport, district inspector, on a second trip into the pit.

Federal inspectors issued no public statement as it is the policy of the Mine Bureau to issue written statements after blueprints and reports are completed.

Speeding Blamed In Fatal Crash

An inquest into the death of a Green Spring, W. Va., youth yesterday established that the automobile accident which caused his death Saturday night was due in part to excessive speed.

The youth, Eskin Cannon, 19, died as a result of injuries sustained when a car driven by Jack Hottel, 20, Berkeley Springs, crashed against a bridge near Romney.

Hampshire County Prosecuting Attorney J. F. Zimmerman stated last night that no charges have been filed yet and expressed the belief that the matter will be investigated further when the Grand Jury convenes next month.

Trooper F. H. Tribett, who investigated with Trooper E. D. Harbert, said the driver claimed he was blinded by the headlights of a large truck as he rounded the curve leading to the bridge.

Hottel is still a patient at Memorial Hospital, where he was admitted after the accident. Two 16-year-old passengers, both residents of Berkeley Springs, were also treated at the hospital after the accident.

Missing Woman Found On Farm Near Her Home

81-Year-Old In "Good" Condition

Mrs. Agnes Burkey, 81-year-old Parsons, W. Va., woman missing from her home since Friday, was found yesterday—her 63d wedding anniversary—by a 13-year-old farm boy.

West Virginia State Police said Mrs. Burkey was found by Roy Harper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Harper, on the Harper farm six miles from Parsons. The elder Harper had noticed that some of his cattle in a field 300 yards behind the farmhouse seemed disturbed, and sent the boy to investigate.

The boy found Mrs. Burkey, suffering from shock and exposure, wandering aimlessly through the field on her hands and knees. When the boy asked her what she was doing, she said she was looking for her husband.

She was taken to Tucker County Hospital at Parsons, where her condition was described as "good." Attaches said she had bruises on the hands and face. She was admitted for observation.

Police reported that the search was centering in the area in which the elderly woman was found, as James Johnson, Montrose, W. Va., reported seeing her in that section at about 8 p. m. Sunday.

Over 200 persons, including State Police, firemen, Forestry Department employes and Boy Scouts, took part in the four-day search. State Police brought bloodhounds into the search Saturday.

Mrs. Burkey's husband, Jesse, 79, said he was out cutting wood when his wife disappeared. He was not alarmed at first, he said, because he thought she had gone to pick berries.

Old Age Claim Errors Explained

"A resident of Maryland recently lost $2,069.40 in Old-Age and Survivors Insurance benefits because he delayed filing his claim," William W. Wood, manager of the Cumberland field office of the Social Security Administration, announced.

This man was over 65 years of age when he retired from employment which was covered by the Old-Age Insurance program back in January 1943. He did not file a claim at that time, according to his own statement, because he had been told that he would have to "sign away" his property.

Wood explained that this was a false impression held by many wage earners. Monthly payments under the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance program are paid for during the working life of the beneficiary. However, Wood continued, to receive these payments he must make a claim for them.

Monthly payments are only retroactive for three months prior to the month in which the claim is filed. The man who lost $2,069.40 by his delay could have received his first check for January 1943 had he filed his claim promptly. However, he did not file claim until, June 1948. The first month for which he was paid, therefore, was March 1948. In all, he lost sixty-two monthly payments.

Wood said that another Maryland man lost $449.16 by delaying to file his claim. This man spent an entire year trying to secure a birth certificate.

He added, "The Social Security Administration may require proof of age but no one should delay in filing his claim because he does not have a birth certificate. The field office of the Social Security Administration will assist the claimant in securing any age data that may be necessary."

Wood pointed out that the local office of the Social Security Administration which is located in Room 309, Postoffice Building, is maintained to serve the people who reside in Allegany and Garrett Counties in Maryland, and Grant, Hampshire, Mineral, Hardy and Pendleton Counties in West Virginia. Anyone having a problem relating to the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance program is urged to write, phone or call at this office.

City Manager Plan: Managers Win Promotion For Showing Good Record

By RICHARD S. CHILDS
Chairman of the Council, National Municipal League

The city manager is a professional. He should not be expected to have divine wisdom but he generally possesses talent, experience, the ability to work hard and a desire to get ahead in his career. Good city managers are rewarded with higher pay and bigger jobs. Take the record of C. A. Harrell:

Years	City	Salary
1928-1930	Cincinnati (executive assistant to City Manager)	$ 4,200
1930-1932	Portsmouth, Ohio (Manager)	8,000
1932-1937	Binghamton, N. Y. (Manager)	9,000
1937-1946	Schenectady, N. Y. (Manager)	10,000
1946-	Norfolk, Virginia (Manager)	20,000

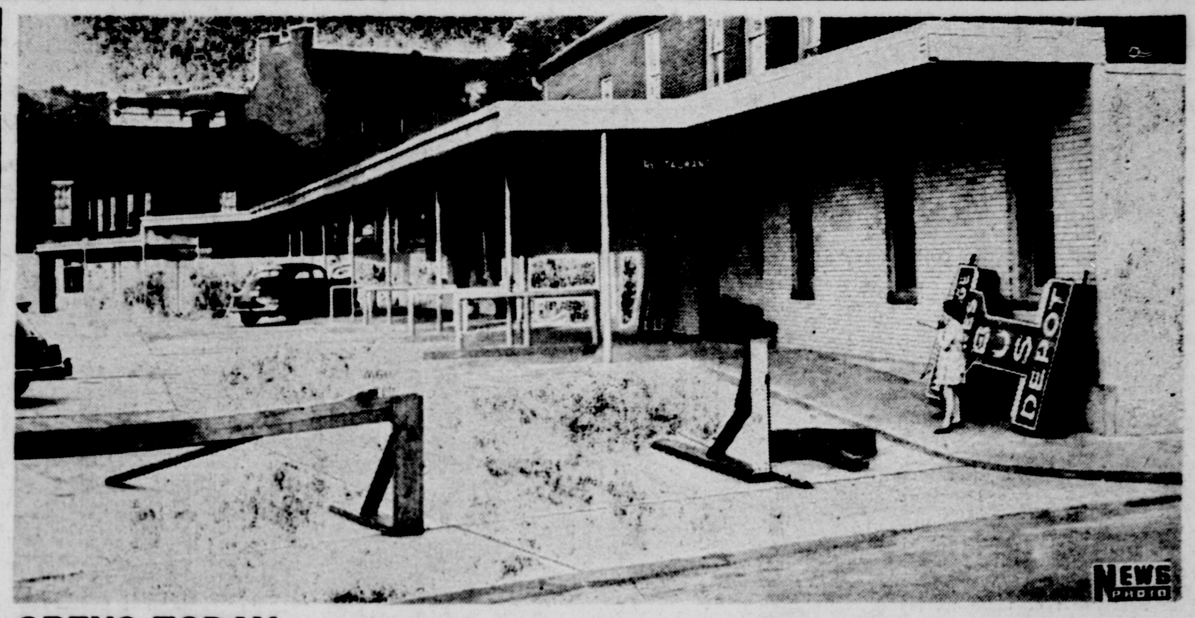

City councils demand experienced men. In 1947 two-thirds of the new manager appointments went to non-residents and there were 57 promotions from smaller cities. At the end of 1946 there were 47 managers who had managed three or more different cities.

They Borrow Good Ideas

The pool of experience is vast. Since 1912 there have been something like 2,000 managers. They have accumulated close to 15,000 years of experience. The plan is stronger today than ever because managers have developed the habit of copying each other's ideas for improved administration, and have good arrangements for getting them.

One main reason why City Man-

Kiwanis Distributes 9,000,000 Pamphlets

More than 9,000,000 patriotic pamphlets, based on a wide variety of subjects and designed to show that "It's Fun to Live in America," have been distributed by Kiwanis clubs from coast to coast since the first of the year.

This announcement was made yesterday by W. E. Landefeld, president of the Kiwanis Club of Cumberland, who said the purpose of the pamphlet campaign is to stress the importance of maintaining the individual enterprise system in the United States.

Each of the seven pamphlets that has been issued up to this time has made dramatic comparisons between America's form of government and the totalitarian theory of centralized control of business, industry, agriculture, the church, home and school, Landefeld stated.

Kiwanians throughout the nation are using the pamphlets as inserts with payroll envelopes, statements, circulars, and other correspondence. When this phase of the campaign comes to a conclusion in December, it is estimated that nearly 15,000,000 leaflets will have been circulated.

11-Year-Old Rheumatic Fever Patient Gets New Bicycle

Local Man Has Wheel Delivered To Hospital

Little Jackie Nestor has a new bicycle.

It was taken to Memorial Hospital where Jackie has been a patient for the past eight weeks, suffering from rheumatic fever, by City Police officers at the request of a local business man.

Charles Hansel, who operates the Astor Restaurant on Virginia Avenue, bought the new bicycle for Jackie, after he reads in the NEWS yesterday that Jackie's new wheel had been stolen just a few days before he became seriously ill. Since then, Jackie has grieved over his loss continually.

Hensel said he believes the new bicycle might help Jackie along the road to recovery and just decided to go get him one. City Police last night commented, "Charlie does things like that. He likes kids."

The new bicycle was taken to Jackie's room and he was pretty excited over the new wheel and is now anxious to get out and ride it again. His mother, Mrs. Virginia Nestor, 314 Washington Street, a waitress in a local restaurant knew nothing about the publicity, before hand, but last night she said, "If Jackie is pleased, I guess it's all right with me."

The NEWS was besieged yesterday with telephone calls from people who wanted more information about Jackie and his missing bicycle. In fact, if someone had just said so, a half-dozen new wheels could have been obtained for him with no trouble at all. Reporters coming into the news rooms yesterday and last night said many people had commented on the situation and wanted to extend their good wishes to Jackie for a speedy recovery.

So Jackie, with his new bicycle, now has a lot of very fine people hoping he will be well and strong soon, and many people who are waiting to see him out riding his new wheel.

Former Officers Needed By Army

There are many opportunities for former officers in the newly-expanded Army program according to M. Sgt. William Rogers of the local Reserve office.

By September 30, the Army will need company grade officers and a few majors for all of their combat arms from armored units to the transportation corps. Members of the Officers Reserve Corps, National Guard officers, or officers of the Woman's Army Corps are eligible for duty, he said.

Sgt. Rogers pointed out that the maximum age limit for company officers has been raised to 50 years and for ranks above captain to 60 years. Thus, a 48-year-old man with a company rank who has not quite reached his 49th birthday may enlist for a year. If he is 47 but not yet 48, he may enlist for two years. Others, Sgt. Rogers said, must sign up for three-year periods.

Officers receiving pensions, disability allowances or disability compensation are eligible, provided they waive their pensions while on active duty and meet the physical requirements. Members of the United States Army, retired, are ineligible, however, Sgt. Rogers explained.

He also said that there are 9 to 12-month overhead assignments in the Second Army Area for former enlisted men regardless of grade, military occupational specialty or race.

Sgt. Rogers asked that all who wish to apply see him at the Army Reserve Office in the Postoffice Building. Any officer of the Army of the United States who is not a member of the Reserve may also join the ORC at the office and become eligible for the program.

The application did not name the prospective occupant of the structure.
